Farley Stays On Sidelines As 3d-Term Stage Is Set

'Draft Roosevelt' Show Directed By Byrnes, Hopkins, Newest Sphinxes

Main Actor Off Stage

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will not visit the Democratic Convention, as he did in 1932 and 1936, he declared yesterday. But he still kept secret his decision as to a third term. Page 2.

Drama in Chicago

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, July 12.—Within two days of its opening, the Democratic Convention tonight assumed all of the trappings of a third-term show, stage-managed and directed by the President's own liaison officers.

Control of precedent-breaking third-term arrangements were being carefully steered around the silent figure of James A. Farley, with the President's knowledge.

And today there were three sphinxes on the Chicago scene instead of one. Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins and Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, are here. Fresh from Washington with the President's own orders, they are as tight-lipped as Farley, with whom they did not confer.

There appeared hardly a doubt any more that a "draft Roosevelt" plan is being perfected, in which Farley asks and is given no part. The President as yet has authorized no one to say for him that he will or will not accept. He has left himself an out. But the set-up is here, the President has had a hand in it, and indications increasingly point to an actual draft.

Walker May Be Chairman

Farley convinced reporters today that he is out of contact with Washington. Newsmen had abundant evidence that Hopkins and Byrnes are now the President's contact men with this convention, and tomorrow they may be joined by another, Frank C. Walker, for many years one of the President's most intimate associates, and reported to be the President's choice for national chairman should Farley step down.

Add to this third-term "strategy board" the name of Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, likewise due today, plus the cooperation of Solicitor General Francis Biddle and Senator Wagner, of New York, and you have the men around the President who apparently are running this show.

Senator Byrnes, who has demonstrated his ability in the same capacity in the Senate, is expected to be the President's convention floor manager, while Hopkins is regarded as the liaison contact.

Farley Still in Race

Hopkins, who had not seen Farley during his first hours here, tonight was reported arranging an interview in a last effort to persuade Farley to continue as the party's political maestro if the President runs.

Farley's name definitely will be presented to the convention regardless of whether the President's is—he was not so silent that he did not say this. Garner's name will be presented also. Both after the con-

Texas Bolters Want Willkie

Dissident Democrats Say They'll Nominate Him at Chicago

Dallas, Tex., July 12 (AP).—Guy Warren, of Corpus Christi, Tex., chairman of the Nominate Willkie Democrats, said today the name of the Republican Presidential nominee definitely would be presented to the National Democratic Convention in Chicago.

Warren left for Chicago to establish his organization's convention headquarters in the Palmer House.

"Since organizing," he said before his departure, "we have received more than 7,000 letters from life-long Democrats from Maine to California pledging their support."

Sand, Gravel Strike Settled As U. S. Yields

Wage-Hour Official Gives Way, Men Agree To 10% Pay Rise

The Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. strike was settled at 5:30 p. m. last night. The strikers will return to work this morning, according to both union and Labor Department spokesmen.

Revision of a wage-hour ruling under which 60 of the 250 Smoot employes who work on river dredges will be classed as seamen was the major point won by the employes. All workers—shore and river—will return to a 10 per cent weekly pay increase.

The settlement was announced by Labor Department Conciliators Howard T. Colvin and John Conner, who for five days had sought to bring about an agreement.

Made 6,500 Idle

End of the strike will release materials vital to the progress of an estimated $50,000,000 of local and Federal construction work—including important projects under the national defense program. Upwards of 6,500 building trades workers were forced into idleness because of the walkout.

A last-minute concession by Col. Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the wage and hour division, was credited with settling the dispute. He agreed to amend his wage-hour ruling to bring the 60 dredge workers under the seamen classification.

The company's former schedule of working hours—from 48 to 67½ hours a week depending on the type of work—will be retained and all employes will be paid for the period during which they were on strike, said Colvin.

Income Had Been Cut

The walkout was in protest against the wage-hour ruling which exempted dredge workers from the seamen classification and required them to put in no more than 42 hours a week, depending on the half" for overtime. There is no restriction on the working hours of seamen.

When the Smoot Co. complied with the ruling and reduced hours of its dredge workers, the result meant less wages for employes involved.

Joseph Gillis, Baltimore representative of the American Federation of Labor, who handled negotiations, said several details of the settlement terms still remain to be ironed out.

In agreeing to reclassify the dredge workers, Col. Fleming declared his action was merely an administrative interpretation and subject to revision by the courts.

Nazis Make Fierce Raids On Scotland

At Least 10 Killed As Bombers Blast All Parts of Island; 11 Planes Shot Down

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), July 13. German bombers carried their blasting attacks on Great Britain into southwest England and Wales last night after striking deadly blows yesterday at industrial Scotland.

The ministry of home security reported early today that Nazi aircraft dropped bombs last night "on places in southwest of England and in Wales . . . little damage was caused and casualties are believed to have been slight."

Planes believed to have been German also were reported over northeast England.

Blast at Shipping

The Germans yesterday smashed again, as they have done, day after day, at British shipping on the east and south coasts.

Raids on Scotland went on into the night, the Germans, it was reported, dropping high explosive and incendiary bombs in southeast and southwest Scotland and incendiary bombs in northeast Scotland.

A lone raider flying over a southwest Scottish area dropped bombs wrecking a building containing six apartments and causing a number of casualties, including one man believed fatally injured.

The fiercest blows were aimed in northeast Scotland, where at least ten persons were reported killed. This attack may have been directed from German bases in Stavanger, Norway, at which British airmen have been pounding for weeks.

Eleven of the raiders were reported officially to have been shot down. Two British planes were missing.

Air Communique

An air ministry communique thus summarized the destruction of these Nazi craft, and illustrated how far they had ranged over Britain:

Six shot down while they were attacking a convoy off the southeast coast; one sent to earth in flames on the outskirts of a Scottish port; three off the southeast coast; one shot down into the sea by coastal aircraft.

At the same time, the loss of three other British planes in a heavy assault Thursday night on German munitions works, airdromes, blast furnaces and other objectives was acknowledged.

By these new raids in Scottish areas, a rough outline of the Nazi program seemed to emerge: a series of rotating attacks designed to hit in turn every section of the British Isles.

167 Dead Since June 18

Unofficial tabulations from June 18 up to last night showed 167 deaths from air raids. Some 170 invading Nazi planes were indicated destroyed since the start of the war.

The raid on northeast Scotland produced one aftermath of some satisfaction to the British: It was declared that the Nazi raider which had dropped bombs "in various parts" of a town there had been headed off by British fighter planes and shot down.

Yesterday's melancholy visitations began in early morning with the arrival of a Nazi squadron over the southwest coast.

The Nazis dropped six bombs in half a minute. One smashed a children's playground and then, as British fighter planes roared aloft,

Britain Gives Way to Japan

Offers to Restrict Flow of Supplies Over Burma Road

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 12.—The British have offered to close Burma Road to certain categories of goods for the next two or three months. It was learned in London today that this offer has been made and presumably has been accepted.

Apparently that is the explanation of the Japanese announcement in Tokyo that negotiations over the matter were nearly finished.

The British have not, it is said here, made the surrender which the agreement seems to be on the surface.

The categories of goods which will be stopped are distinctly limited.

Planes Routed British Fleet, Italians Claim

Aircraft Carrier Fired, 2 Destroyers Damaged, They Say

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Rome, July 12.—Another triumph by the Italian air force over the British navy in the Mediterranean was announced officially here today as the newspapers were filled with more details and exultation over the victories claimed for the navy and air force on July 8 and 9.

Italian bombing planes, it is said, attacked a convoy of five heavily loaded cargo vessels escorted by two battleships, an airplane carrier and several minor naval vessels near Malta yesterday.

According to the announcement, one steamer was sunk; two destroyers were badly damaged, and one of them was seen to lower its lifeboats. The airplane carrier, struck by a heavy bomb, was set on fire. Four pursuit planes which took to the air from the British airplane carrier, the communique said, were brought down in flames by Italian bombers, and two Italian planes were lost in the battle.

Newspapers Jubilant

The communique asserts that in the battle of July 9 antiaircraft artillery aboard an Italian cruiser shot down five torpedo-carrying planes and two bombers, one of which, still loaded with its bombs, exploded when it fell into the sea.

All the press of Italy is filled today with jubilation at what is considered here a glorious victory over the British fleet last Monday and Tuesday, the front pages are black with bold type of Premier Mussolini's message of congratulation to this country's navy and similar commendations by Gen. Pricolo, chief of staff of aviation, to his military pilots.

Elephant Tramples Keeper, Another Comes to Rescue

Fort Worth, Tex., July 12 (AP).—At sunset they shot Sugar, an elephant whose name belied her disposition.

She was executed for striking down her keeper, Jim Brown, 41, and trampling him nearly to death. He is in a critical condition.

Seven bullets were used by zoo attendants to dispose of her in the rock house she shared with old Queen Tut, elephant heroine of the attack on Brown.

Gentle Queen Tut, many years older than the 35-year-old, 4,000-pound Sugar, helped drive the angered Sugar away from her prey this morning as she slammed Brown with her trunk. Queen Tut pushed Sugar from the elephant house and returned to guard Brown until rescuers could pull him from the pen.

British Fire Shell To Halt U. S. Ship

Boston, July 12 (AP).—Firing of a shell across her bow by a British shore battery at Port of Spain, Trinidad, was reported by crew members of the new American freighter Flying Fish upon arrival today.

Capt. Waldo E. Wollaston declined to discuss the incident which occurred July 5. Others aboard said the vessel, which had been given approval to proceed after being halted by a British patrol, was entering port with a pilot and with proper signals flying when the shell was fired. After frantic ship-to-shore signaling, the vessel was permitted to proceed.

Chile Ripe For Nazis' Plucking

Fifth Columnists Permeate Army; Diplomats Openly Prepare 'Der Tag'

By Russell B. Porter
Copyright by New York Times

Buenos Aires, July 12.—After spending a week in Chile I have returned to Buenos Aires to cable this report on the fifth column there because the Chilean government does not permit transmission of uncensored news.

In this case the dispatch was stopped during the transmission on the ground of "affecting Chilean neutrality."

Officials asserted Chile desired to maintain "strict neutrality." They also insisted the story magnified the extent of the fifth column danger there.

In contrast, responsible American sources familiar with the situation said it was a true picture that should be made known to the United States public.

Nazis Quiescent

Violent press and radio attacks against the United States as well as pro-Nazi propaganda characterize the Chilean fifth column, which is one of the best financed of such movements in South America. The Nazis are working night and day with the help of certain Chilean elements.

The Popular Front government, hitherto preoccupied with social welfare and internal politics, asserts it has the situation under control, but Americans, more familiar with Nazi technique, question this, believing the Germans are merely quiet while awaiting orders from Berlin.

The fifth column campaign is reported to be directed by Wilhelm von Pochhammer, counselor of the German Embassy in Santiago, whose agents are said to supervise closely the activities of even the German Ambassador, an old-school diplomat.

Attache Runs Party

The administrative head of the Nazi party is declared to be Walter Boettger, the commercial attache, who has charge of the organization and financing of Nazi activities through special taxes on German and German-Chilean firms and individuals. These taxes are said to total 20 per cent of receipts and salaries. Reliable reports place Nazi spending at $50,000 to $100,000 monthly for espionage, propaganda and similar activities.

Wilhelm Hammerschmidt, reportedly former head of the Berlin foreign office press department, recently arrived in Santiago as the embassy's press attache. He came via Russia, Japan and San Francisco with two associates and two

Canada Expected To Draft 50,000 For Army Training

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ontario, July 12.—Fifty thousand young Canadians between the ages of 21 and 24 are likely to be called up for 40 days' compulsory military training on September 15. Their pay will be $1.20 a day, the rate set for the non-permanent militia. No allowances will be paid.

Statistical checks have shown that there are in Canada 800,000 single men between the ages of 21 and 34. There are not enough instructors available to train so many men at once, but military authorities estimate that by rushing the training of extra instructors now they will be ready to handle 50,000 men by the time camp space is available in the middle of September. For every thousand men 120 instructors are needed.

Men in essential industries will be exempted from training.

Clipper Begins New Zealand Run

Los Angeles, July 12 (U.P.).—The 42-ton American Clipper took off from Cabrillo Beach late today to inaugurate a regular Pan American Airways commercial route between the United States and New Zealand.

Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan-American, sent the 74-passenger Clipper on the second leg of its 8,008-mile flight—to Honolulu—following its arrival from San Francisco. The flight to New Zealand will be made every two weeks, Trippe said, with possibility of passenger service opening within two months.

Roosevelt to Call Up 50,000 Guards to Train With Regular Army

Action to Await Change in Law, Expected as Soon As Recess Ends

President Roosevelt has decided to order into extended service, as soon as Congress can grant him the authority, four divisions and seven antiaircraft regiments of the National Guard, it was announced last night.

The unprecedented peacetime mobilization of guardsmen, including some harbor defense regiments, will involve an estimated 50,000 men from 13 States.

While the White House said the action would be taken "as soon as possible," it was made clear that issuance of the orders waits only on legislative action expected shortly after Congress reconvenes July 22.

Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, announcing the decision reached by Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary of War Stimson, said there is an overwhelming desire among the reserve soldiery, many of them in camp now, for extended training.

Earlier yesterday President Roosevelt told his press conference that he was considering proposals for ordering out the Guard's entire strength of 226,000 men.

Plan for 1,200,000

The White House announcement came shortly after Gen. George C. Marshall unfolded before the Senate Military Affairs Committee plans for bringing 1,200,000 men under arms by April.

The Army Chief of Staff indorsed the sweeping Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill, which would require registration of 40,000,000 men between the ages of 18 and 65 and make men between 21 and 31 liable for immediate training.

Legislation to enable the President to order out the Guard already has been introduced by Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee.

The powers sought by the President allow him to merge Guard formations with units of the Regular Army. Under the power to call out the Guard, which the President can exercise without Congressional action, Guard units must preserve their identity under their State commanders.

The entire National Guard is made up of 22 divisions, 18 of which are infantry, and four, cavalry. There are, in addition, 12 antiaircraft regiments.

Units Not Designated

Army officials said last night there would be no designation of specific units ordered into training until Congress, now in recess for the Democratic convention, approves the necessary legislation.

One Guard division, Early reported, will be drawn from units in New York and New Jersey; a second from Tennessee and the Carolinas; a third from New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arizona and Colorado, and the fourth from Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho.

The antiaircraft regiments to be ordered out represent about one-third of the Guard's strength in this branch of the service. Included in the President's plans for an early call to service are an unspecified number of harbor defense regiments, Early said.

The White House secretary, plainly indicating that the President's proposal may be preliminary to plans for placing the entire Guard in the field, said he could not say how long the units ordered out would remain in training.

"Immediate" mobilization of the full Guard was urged by Gen. Marshall at the Senate committee hear-

Packard Accepts Order For 9,000 Airplane Motors

Company's Directors Approve 'General Arrangement' to Build 6,000 Engines for Britain, 3,000 for U. S.

The Defense Advisory Commission announced last night that directors of the Packard Motor Co. had approved a "general arrangement" for production of 9,000 Rolls Royce airplane motors, one-third of them for the United States and the remainder for Great Britain.

Negotiations for mass production of the motors had been under way for several weeks, first with the Ford Motor Co. Henry Ford's insistence, however, that he would make war implements only for this country caused the defense commission to turn to the Packard company. Combining of orders for the two governments is required in order to achieve the mass production required. Congress has appropriated $43,500,000 to finance this country's share of the orders.

New records were set, meanwhile, in other phases of the arming program.

The Navy let its largest peacetime batch of such contracts when it awarded $136,743,900 worth of work for strengthening air defenses and shore facilities along both coasts. Included was a contract for construction of a hangar and other work at the Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va., at an estimated cost of $225,000. The Jeffress-Dyer Co., of Washington, got the work.

The Army announced a peace-time record of 22,947 enlistments in June and noted that 61.7 per cent of the new soldiers had better than a grammar school education.

The Army also awarded 338 contracts, totaling $46,197,142, for ordnance, Quartermaster Corps, Air

Petain Names New Cabinet, Led by Laval

President Lebrun To Make Farewell Address Today

By the United Press

Zurich, July 12.—Marshal Petain, new totalitarian "chief of the French state," tonight named a 15-member cabinet for his dictatorship after receiving the resignations of the cabinet members he appointed on June 16.

Heading the list of appointees was Pierre Laval, champion of close collaboration with Germany and Italy, who will remain as vice premier under the 84-year-old Petain and undoubtedly will be the "strong man" of the French totalitarian regime.

President Lebrun will make a farewell address to the nation tomorrow, presumably by radio, after surrendering his authority to Petain.

Seven Retain Posts

Of the 15 new cabinet ministers seven were retained in their former posts, including such key figures as Gen. Weygand, Laval, Gen. Georges Colson, Gen. Bertrand Pujo and Paul Baudouin.

Petain named his new cabinet after a ministerial council meeting in Vichy, temporary capital of unoccupied France, at which he received the resignations of the cabinet named 24 days ago as a stopgap regime for negotiation of armistices with Germany and Italy.

The new cabinet, in addition to Laval, includes:

Interior — Adrien Marquet, Mayor of Bordeaux.

National defense—Gen. Weygand.

Defense Tax Profiteers Face Fine, Jail

Roosevelt Rebuffs Pressure to Ease Wage-Hour Rules

In line with the fireside promise to preserve the New Deal gains despite the drive for national defense, President Roosevelt yesterday rebuffed pressure to ease restrictions on working hours while the Treasury issued a warning against profiteering behind the smoke screen of the new tax law.

Following only a few days after White House announcement that Congress will be asked to pass a tax on excess profits, the President read to newsmen a letter from Wage-Hour Administrator Philip B. Fleming which declared "no need has been demonstrated" to raise the 42-hour work-week ceiling.

In the light of that letter, said the President, the Administration will go ahead with the present policy.

Later in the day the Treasury reminded merchants and dealers that there are maximum legal penalties of $1,000 fine and one year in jail for using the new defense taxes to screen unjustified price increases that are in excess of charges that would be warranted by the 12-day-old levies.

Fleming's letter to the President, made public at a White House press conference, cited two World War documents to show that stretched-out working hours reduce labor efficiency.

One was a wartime report of the British Munitions Commission, which stated on the basis of experiments that "a reduction of working hours was associated with an increase in production."

Fleming recounted that the British report found a production index of 100 for a 66-hour work week, 111 output index for 55 hours and 109 output for 45½ hours of work.

100,000 Stranded in War

British Shelve Plan to Send Refugee Children to U. S.

While Washington citizens laid plans yesterday to give haven to large numbers of English children for the duration of the war, word reached the Capital that these young refugees may not get to America after all.

Menaced by German sea ralders in the Atlantic, Great Britain last night abandoned plans for the evacuation of its children, and left 100,000 boys and girls, who had applied for passage to the United States or Canada, stranded in the war zone.

The decision to shelve the government scheme for sending the children to safety was reached because of a lack of convoys and the dangers of intensified sea warfare, the United Press reported.

The British government's announcement that it would not prohibit independent evacuation offered little encouragement.

"In view of the fate of the Arabcor Star the government is unable to take the responsibility of sending shiploads of children from the country without convoy," the ministry of information said.

The Andora Star was sunk by a U-boat west of Ireland last week with a loss of more than 1,000 lives, mostly German and Italian aliens en route to internment camps in Canada.

The announcement also brought little response from officials in Washington. The New York Times, inquiring as to the possibility of American ships being dispatched to England to transport the children, found State Department officials speaking with the utmost reserve. These men believed, apparently, that an American ship sunk with refugee children on board might project the United States danger-

Father Divine Finds Parking In D.C. Anything But Heavenly

By Scott Hart

Peace. Occupying his heavenly limousine and followed by a busload of angels singing carols for the antilynching bill, Father Divine descended from his New York heaven into the hell of Washington traffic yesterday.

Police swarmed about the limousine where Father Divine, dressed in a blue-checked coat, with four fountain pens in his pocket, and white flannel trousers, rode with Mother Divine and his secretaries, Great Love, Victory Dove, Sweet Love and John Lamb.

In front of the Senate Office Building the angels mixed with officers in huddles about the caravan. In the middle, while rain swept down, was the figure of the "King of Glory" receiving a beginner's catechism in the problems of parking.

He didn't understand why Congress wasn't in session to receive his manifesto on uniting the Western Hemisphere for democracy, and his petition with 250,000 names, urging enactment of the antilynching law. He didn't know where he could park the heavenly limousine or what he could do with the busload of angels for the moment. The police were saying it was against the law to bring vehicles there with banners and the rain was making a puddle of his Panama hat.

Further, the heavenly photographer, with a picture of Father Divine on his coat lapel, had momentarily to take new positions, for FURS—Hot? Cheer up—winter is almost here. At least the fur sales are starting as a reminder that the mercury won't always be climbing. And to help you choose your furs for next winter with a fashion-wise eye, The Post has two features on furs this Sunday: One, a page of rotogravure pictures. Two, a page in the Women's Section with more pictures and text by Fashion Editor Marshall Adams.

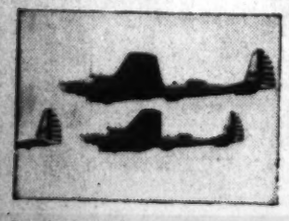
DEMOCRATS—Which Presidents have run for a third term? Exactly what did Washington say on the subject? What were the sentiments of the founder of the Democratic Party—Jefferson? Eddie Folliard puts off packing (he's on his way to Chicago to report the convention to you) long enough to give Sunday Post readers some background on the "two's enough" tradition.

The front page of Sunday's Society Section is given over to the Democrats, too, with Hope Ridings Miller's story of the Washington women who are headed for Chicago. Pictures, of course.

And Robert Albright, already at the scene of the convention, will write his "Gallery Glimpses" today and wire it in for Sunday's Editorial Section.

MOVIES—It's been a long time since Washington has had five new movies hit town at the same time. That's the treat in store for movie fans this coming week, and Nelson Bell tells about each of the shows in his Sunday column. Other features in the Amusement Section of Sunday's Post include Lucie Neville's tips to tourists visiting Hollywood on their vacations, and columns by Louella Parsons, Hedda Hopper, Jimmie Fidler, Leonard Lyons, Lucius Beebe, Charles Driscoll and Weare Holbrook.



DEFENSE—Jack Norris writes about the progress of our airplane factories in speeding up production. Gerald Gross continues his series on members of the National Defense Council with an article on Harriet Elliott. The Gallup Poll shows which political party the voters think would do the better defense job. And the War Review—by Frank Dennis, pinchhitting for Eddie Folliard—serves as a grim reminder of our defense needs.

MORALS—What's the matter with Washington men? demands a girl hotly of Mary Haworth. In Washington only two months, she has had three beaux—and three proposals, but definitely not of marriage. You'll find her letter and Mary's answer in Sunday's Society and Women's Sections. (This column thinks that the girl is wasting her time in Washington. Willkie Asks Rehabilitation Of Nation's Economic Life

'Vibrant' System Vital as Adequate Defense, He Says

By the Associated Press

Denver, July 12.—Wendell L. Willkie told a cheering crowd today that "to rehabilitate our economic life is as necessary as an adequate national defense."

Willkie, speaking from the steps of the State Capitol, said "We must make our economy vital and vibrant to survive the most aggressive and destructive attack in all history on the democratic way of life."

The Republican nominee added:

"It is with a very deep sense of humility—an overpowering sense of humility—that I accept the leadership of a cause to bring unity to America, to rehabilitate our economic life and to build such a national defense that no Hitler or any other totalitarian dictator may ever strike at this great, free democratic life that we have here in America."

"The Mrs." Doesn't Speak

Willkie drove here for a meeting with the Colorado Republican Committee from his Colorado Springs Hotel.

Mrs. Willkie accompanied him. At Littleton, Colo., a spectator asked Mrs. Willkie to speak. She shook her head and Willkie remarked with a grin, "She doesn't make speeches."

"I have had a very restful recuperation.

"I am under a pledge with myself to make no speeches on policies and issues until I make my acceptance speech but I could not let this occasion go by without thanking you for your warm welcome.

"I want to represent you and your cause in the preservation of the United States through the democratic processes."

Willkie, at a luncheon with the Colorado Republican State committee, declared "our very way of life, our democratic system is at one of the testing points in our history. We are facing the most ferocious assault, physically, psychologically and ideologically that we have ever faced in our long history."

Wants a United People

Willkie told his listeners that he would dedicate himself to three things.

"First," he said, "I want a united people without class consciousness, distinction or hatred.

"Two, I want rehabilitation of our national economic life.

"And three, the building of an adequate defense program."

Cromwell "Delighted"

Santa Fe, N. Mex., July 12 (AP).—James R. Cromwell, Democratic candidate for Senator from New Jersey, said in an interview today, "I am delighted" with Wendell Willkie's nomination for President by the Republicans.

"Whoever gets elected, we will have a good President," said the former Minister to Canada, who is on his way from a dude ranch vacation to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

"I can't get myself worked up into a lather of partisanship in a situation like this."

Headquarters in Chicago

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Charles B. Goodspeed, treasurer of the Republican national committee, announced today Wendell L. Willkie's campaign for President would be directed from a national headquarters at 120 South La Salle street.

As in 1936, Goodspeed said, a New York headquarters would be set up to direct the party's drive for votes in the Eastern States.

John D. M. Hamilton, executive director of the Republican national committee, will have his office here. A director for the Eastern headquarters has not been selected, although Sam F. Pryor, Connecticut national committeeman and a vice chairman of the national committee, was being prominently mentioned for the post.

Bostonian Elected As President Over Crawford, D. C. Man

Memphis, Tenn., July 12 (AP).—With New York City's big vote block the deciding margin, the American Newspaper Guild today reelected two past officers who had been accused of inefficiency and maladministration and chose 29-year-old Donal Sullivan, of Boston, as president.

The officers under fire from an antiadministration faction were Executive Vice President Milton Kaufman and Secretary-Treasurer Victor Pasche.

Kaufman beat Max Ways, of Philadelphia, and Pasche defeated I. L. Kenen, of Cleveland. Both votes were 85 1-5 to 45 4-5, with New York casting its 23 ballots for the winning candidates.

Sullivan, a member of the Boston Globe's editorial staff since 1935, was elected over Kenneth Crawford, Washington newspaperman and incumbent president aligned with the group opposing Kaufman and Pasche. The vote was 78 2-3 to 66 1-3, with the New York delegates giving Sullivan all but 1 8-15 of their 23 votes.

The guild president is unpaid, and Kaufman and Pasche, as the two salaried officials, direct most of the union's activities.

The convention was concluded this afternoon.

The faction supporting Kaufman and Pasche made a clean sweep of the ten vice presidencies, with the exception of Harry Martin, of Memphis, who was reelected by acclamation.

The new vice presidents, who with the president and the two paid officers constitute the executive board, are:

Agnes Fahy, of Newark, N. J.; Martin; Don Pinkston, of Sioux City, Iowa; George Wilson, of San Francisco; Ralph Foster, of Toronto; Philip M. Connelly, of Los Angeles (at large); Anthony Berardi, of Chicago (at large); Richard Henry of Denver (at large), and Julius Klyman, of St. Louis (at large). Klyman was one of the original protestants against Kaufman and Pasche, but he announced during the convention he had "changed his mind."

Detroit was given the 1941 convention.

President Signs Bill for New Recorder's Office

The President yesterday signed a bill authorizing the District Commissioners to request a $450,000 loan and grant from the PWA to erect a building for the recorder of deeds.

It is understood the Commissioners will request this money immediately.

The new building, which has been sought by Dr. William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds, for many years, will be erected on the site of the old Police Court Building, Fifth and D streets northwest.

Aluminum Co. Raises Wages, Averts Strike

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 12.—The Aluminum Co. of America agreed to grant a wage increase of 2 cents an hour to its hourly rated employes in an agreement reached tonight with the C. I. O. Aluminum Workers Union, ending a protracted controversy in which a strike in the vital defense industry had been threatened.

The agreement represented a compromise of union demands for a general increase of 10 cents an hour. The new rate establishes a minimum of 65 cents an hour, the same as in the glass industry, but 2½ cents higher than that of steel. The new rate goes into effect July 14.

"I think it represents a fair settlement," said Nick Zonarich, union president, who predicted his organization would formally approve the agreement at mass meetings in the various plants this week-end.

The C. I. O. represents 15,000 workers in plants at New Kensington, Pa.; Edgewater, N. J.; Detroit, Mich.; Badin, N. C., and Alcoa, Tenn.

A spokesman for the company estimated the annual increase would amount to between $1,000,000 and $1,250,000.

Albany, N. Y., July 12 (AP).—Settlement "of all issues" which threatened a strike of 35,000 workers in New York City's $240,000,000 cloak and suit industry was announced today by Gov. Lehman.

Lehman, after a day and night of conferences with employer and union representatives, said employers withdrew their demand for elimination of a clause in a contract which expired June 1 limiting the number of contractors with whom a jobber can do business.

Union representatives claimed the clause, major item of dispute, would bring cut throat competition and result in lowering of wages.

Lehman said the workers, idle since yesterday, would return to work Monday.

Labor Board Orders Weir To Rehire 17

Won't Recognize C.I.O.'s Steel Union As Bargaining Agent

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 12.—The National Labor Relations Board, in a preliminary decision in its longest and costliest case, ordered the $125,000,000 Weirton Steel Co. today to dissolve independent unions at two plants and reinstate with back pay 17 of 300 employes who claimed they were dismissed for union activity.

At the same time, the board refused to recognize the C. I. O.'s Steel Workers Organizing Committee—which filed the charges against the company—as bargaining agent for Weirton's employes.

The decision was based on the board's four-year-long proceeding against the company headed by Ernest T. Weir.

Assaults Must Cease

The independent unions which the company was directed to disestablish are at the plants in Steubenville, Ohio, and Weirton, W. Va. Organized under Weirton's employe representative plan, they were described by the S. W. O. C. as company unions."

The company was also directed to "cease physical assaults on union employes or inciting others to such action." The decision said that "special watchmen" employed by the company "roamed the streets, trailed C. I. O. sympathizers and assaulted S. W. O. C. organizers." The C. I. O. called the watchmen a "hatchet gang."

The board dismissed, however, a petition by the S. W. O. C. seeking recognition as bargaining agent for the 12,000 employes of the company, main unit of the National Steel Corporation, of which Weir is chairman. The board held the S. W. O. C. had not established a majority among the employes.

Case Cost $1,000,000

The four-year legal battle started in 1936 after the company mechanized its tinplate mills and discharged 300 employes.

The S. W. O. C. filed charges with the N. L. R. B. and the resulting hearings in three States—West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania—lasted 18 months, about 700 witnesses being heard. Unofficial estimates placed the cost of the case at more than $1,000,000.

One N. L. R. B. examiner, Edward Grandison Smith, quit after verbal clashes with Clyde Armstrong, company counsel, who was later barred from the hearings.

Weir is Republican national finance chairman.

Roosevelt Won't Attend Convention

Refuses to Say Whether He Will Send a Message

President Roosevelt said flatly yesterday that he would not go to the Democratic National Convention at Chicago, but he revealed nothing of his third-term decision. Neither would he disclose whether he would have any part in the convention, through associates or through a message to the meeting.

His week-end plans call for a Potomac River cruise, starting this evening, a return to the White House late tomorrow, and continued work on the defense program throughout next week, the President explained at his press conference.

Next week-end's relaxation will be a trip to Hyde Park, N. Y., he said, adding that the schedule of alternate cruises and Hyde Park visits will probably continue through the summer.

Answers With Loud "No"

The first of the efforts to learn the President's plans was a direct question as to whether he would go to Chicago. The answer was a loud and definite "No."

"If you go to Chicago, will you fly?" one of the braver reporters asked.

The President laughed and said that the question seemed to him to be a slur upon his veracity, as he already had stated that he was not going.

He next was asked if he would have a personal part in the convention. The question was too difficult for him, he replied.

The Republicans, a reporter recalled, had placed great stress on the fact that the Republican convention had been "unbossed," would the Democrats be able to say the same thing? Mr. Roosevelt said he did not have the faintest idea.

Would the President send a message to the Chicago convention? The President said he had no thought on the matter, one way or the other.

Across the street, in the State Department Building, Secretary of State Hull was asked at his press conference about published reports that he was the likeliest choice for Vice President under Mr. Roosevelt, but would say only that if a person couldn't get his name in the papers these days he was unfortunate.

Ludlow Urges Referendum

But as Capital interest centered in Chicago, with Congress in recess, Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, called on the convention resolutions committee to include his "war referendum" project as a plank in the party platform to be built at Chicago.

In a letter to Senator Wagner, of New York, chairman of the resolutions committee, Ludlow contended that "if we Democrats are looking for a winning issue both right and effective, this is the one to sweep the country."

The Indiana representative referred specifically to the resolution he long has sponsored for a Constitutional amendment requiring Congress to submit any war declaration to popular vote except in the case of threatened invasion of the United States or a Western Hemisphere country.

And Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, head of the public power bloc in the House, announced that he will leave for the convention today to urge adoption of a strong plank on the power question, which, he predicted, would be the "outstanding issue" in the coming campaign. He said: "The paramount issue in this campaign is: 'Shall the people rule, or the power trust control?'"

Irving Berlin, writer of the song, "God Bless America," meanwhile granted the Republicans the right to use the song in the Wendell Willkie campaign. It was sung at the recent Republican convention by Margaret Speaks, opera star.

Tydings to Be Named

Baltimore, July 12 (AP).—Leaders of Maryland's delegation to the Democratic National Convention went ahead today with plans to offer Senator Millard E. Tydings' name to the convention as the State's favorite-son candidate for the Presidential nomination.

Apparently disregarding mounting signs President Roosevelt may be nominated on the first ballot, the delegation members even gave hints that a considerable number were determined to vote against a third term.

Edward J. Colgan, jr., manager of Senator George L. Radcliffe's winning primary election campaign, was selected to place Tydings' name in nomination at Chicago.

Under instructions from the State convention, the delegation is bound to Tydings unless the President is a candidate. In that event, the delegates are free to vote as individuals, not bound by the unit rule.

Steward Urges Federal Employe Merit Plank

Chicago, July 12.—Luther C. Steward, of Washington, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, tonight was waiting his turn before the Democratic resolutions committee with a new Federal employe merit plank.

Steward will ask the resolutions committee to declare in its platform for "strengthening and completing" the program for Federal personnel improvements already begun or pending.

He urged that "proper Civil Service standards" be maintained in any enlargement of Federal personnel needed to meet the present emergency.

M'Conihe Balks D. C. Delegate Cut in Chicago

Democratic National Committee Approves District Primary Rule

A Staff Correspondent

Chicago, July 12.—Quick thinking by Malcolm S. McConihe, Democratic national committeeman for the District, today saved District of Columbia Democrats from a 50 per cent slash in their delegate representation at the next Democratic National Convention.

Before the national committee here was the Green resolution. It would have granted a delegate bonus to States that give a majority to the party's candidate, but would cut representation of the District, Alaska and Puerto Rico from six to three delegates, and deprive the Canal Zone, Virgin Islands and Philippines of any delegates.

It Was McConihe's Cue

W. R. Bennett, San Juan committeeman, strenuously protested the Puerto Rico slash, declaring "the eyes of Latin America are watching what you do to us." Bennett offered an amendment exempting Puerto Rico from the cut. McConihe was on his feet immediately, with an amendment exempting the District.

"Remember our $100 Jackson Day dinner," said McConihe. Over leadership opposition only, Puerto Rico and the District were exempted from the cut, and both will continue to send six delegates to Democratic conventions instead of three.

On motion of McConihe, the national committee also approved the District's present rules for selecting national committeemen and delegates, which have been in effect since 1916, although frequently challenged.

Introduces an Innovation

The rules provide for the Democratic central committee of the District, composed of 22 members who have been Washington residents at least five years. McConihe included an innovation, specifying that these must "claim no other residence."

Also approved was the practice of calling the central committee to meet 60 days prior to a National Democratic Convention, to arrange for primary election of six delegates, six alternates, a national committeeman and a committee woman and the 22 members of the central committee.

Mehl Supplants Duvel as CEA Head

Dr. Joseph W. T. Duvel, chief of the Department of Agriculture's Commodity Exchange Administration, yesterday became associate chief of that organization. At the same time Joseph M. Mehl, assistant CEA chief, became Duvel's successor.

Duvel's transfer was at his own request, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace announced. After 38 years with the Department of Agriculture, Duvel asked to be relieved of administrative responsibilities so that he may devote more time to research.

Experts Speed Draft of Bill To Tax Profits

Measure Expected To Be Submitted to Congress by Aug. 1

A tentative draft of the new excess profits tax bill will be submitted to the House subcommittee on taxes not later than August 1, Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee predicted yesterday.

Considered most important of the nonmilitary measures still to be enacted at this session of Congress, the tax bill is being worked on by experts from the Treasury and the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

It was reported yesterday that the bill would provide for excess profits taxes only, and there was strong indication that the new levies might be imposed exclusively on corporations and not on individual incomes. Other methods of raising revenue in all probability will be deferred at least until next year, when perhaps the long-talked-of "general revision of the tax structure" may be effected.

Sees Long Hearings

Representative Doughton said yesterday after a conference at the Treasury that he thought a tentative draft of the bill would be submitted to the tax subcommittee, which, after considering it, would send it on to the full committee for public hearings.

Representative Doughton refused to guess how long it will take Congress to enact the measure into law, but one Senator well acquainted with the situation predicted the bill would not be sent to the White House until September.

The probability at present is that Congress will remain in session until then, if the war continues. Some of the few Senators remaining in Washington indicated yesterday, however, that after the Democratic Convention there will be an increasing desire by members of Congress to go home for the Presidential campaign.

Wants Congress to Stay

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, House minority leader and recently appointed chairman of the Republican National Committee, said he wanted Congress to stay in session "straight through to December—as long as there is danger of our becoming involved in war."

Aside from the tax bill and additional legislation carrying out the national defense program—including compulsory military service, the Walter-Logan Bill to curb the powers of Federal administrative agencies is likely to come up this session.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, one of its backers, said yesterday he planned to call up the measure "at the first opportunity" after Congress reconvenes following the Democratic convention. Technically, the recess ends Monday, July 22, but the Senate will conduct no business until the following week.

The Democratic exodus from the Capitol continued in full flood yesterday, as Senators and Representatives headed for Chicago—most of them convinced that President Roosevelt will accept renomination.

Antiaircraft Unit To Drill Today

A detachment of 120 men from Batteries F, G and H of the 260th Antiaircraft Artillery of the District National Guard will roll out of the District Armory at 6 a. m. today, bound for practice with 37 mm. antiaircraft guns at Fortress Monroe, Va., Capt. Thomas Martin is in command.

Today and tomorrow the remainder of the regiment will hold rifle practice at Fort Simms.

This week, 24 antiaircraft guns, costing $20,000 each, will be sent here to complete the armament of the regiment, it was announced.

Farley Remains on Sidelines as Third-Term Stage Is Set

vention may step out of politics, but they will not "take a walk" in the Al Smith style.

The first real life breathed into the convention picture today in a round of business developments:

The resolutions committee organized, elected Senator Wagner, of New York, chairman, and opened public hearings on platform. Philip Murray, vice president of the C. I. O., first witness, accused Wendell L. Willkie of designs on the National Labor Relations Act, demanded a plank declaring flatly for its continuance and opposed "any policy which may in any way lead toward American involvement in the European or Asiatic wars."

The Democratic National Committee held its last meeting as presently constituted, and heard what many regarded as a "farewell address" from Chairman Farley. Farley thanked committeemen for more friendly, cooperation and help than he said has been given any other national chairman. He said the loyalty of committeemen and party workers "have made it possible for me to be successful."

Before adjournment, the national committee adopted a "compromise" plan for reapportioning delegates. Based on the Democratic vote in the last previous election, it will allow a "bonus" of one additional delegate from each State that gave a majority to the party's candidate. A substitute plan by Gov. E. D. Rivers, of Georgia, which in effect would provide much more liberal representation from the South, was defeated.

But the highlights of the day were arrival of Hopkins and Byrnes, and Postmaster General Farley's 4 p. m. press conference.

Hopkins, most intimately posted of any man at this convention on the President's plans, arrived in the same car with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Senator Wheeler, of Montana. Wheeler, apparently satisfied with the President's "no troops to Europe" pledge, will not let his name be presented if the President is, and has dropped any plans for a third-party bolt.

Hopkins on arrival, of course, "had no knowledge at all" of the President's plan. Assigned "official car No. 1," by Mayor Kelly, he was sped to the Blackstone Hotel, went to his rooms, and dropped for the day from the public eye. He did not see Farley.

Senator Byrnes arrived on the second section of the same train. Byrnes conferred at once with Senator Wagner, and attended the opening session of the resolutions committee. Byrnes greeted Farley, with whom he is on excellent terms, but held no extended conference.

Unless important figures here are misinformed, Hopkins and Byrnes were in close touch with Washington all day. Farley was not.

Farley had "no news," but his press conference was the most enlightening he has held since his Hyde Park secrecy injunction.

The Postmaster General expanded his frequently repeated "My position remains unchanged" declaration that his name would be presented to the Democratic Convention.

Would he "take a walk" if the President were renominated?

Farley flushed. "Everybody who knows anything about me knows that Jim Farley is a Democrat," he said slowly.

Had Hopkins called? "No, but I'm staying right here and I will be glad to see Harry Hopkins or anyone else."

"You rank him in the Cabinet, don't you?" a reporter asked.

"That all depends on what you mean," Farley smiled. "If you mean as a member of the Cabinet, yes." Informed of the slap, Hopkins was reported planning to contact Farley tonight.

All efforts to persuade the party chairman to forecast the outcome of the November elections or to comment on Willkie's prospect proved futile.

"I'm not going to make any forecasts on the election until this convention is over," he said.

"Assuming Mr. Roosevelt is the nominee, how will the elections go?" a questioner pressed.

Farley turned to the reporter and said emphatically: "I am not assuming anything until it happens."

"Have you any doubt it will happen?"

Farley smiled: "Sometimes."

As for the Postmaster General's reported plans to go with the New York Yankees, Farley said: "This is a political convention, and that question had better be answered at a sports conference."

"By the way," a reporter asked, "do you have any news?"

"That's the smartest question asked," replied Farley. "I'm sorry, I haven't."

Nor did anyone else have news for the record, though reports spread that Attorney General Jackson and Frank Walker may have some, possibly the President's final decision, when they arrive here tomorrow. In the gossip category, Secretary of State Hull was still rated the favorite for Vice President, "if he would take it." Supreme Court Justice Douglas and Senator Byrnes are still the runners up. There are no dark horses in this convention. As Farley puts it, all of the mounts "have their blankets off."

Opening platform hearings, meanwhile, only skirted around the edges of the next most important issue to be decided at the convention—the foreign affairs plank. The tractable mood of Senator Wheeler and other isolationists added weight to reports that the President's pledge not to furnish troops for Europe's wars will be included.

As Murray, C. I. O. vice president and chairman of the steel workers' organizing committee, took the stand, Wheeler quickly approved his proposal that "if we are going to make war, we should make war on poverty and not on men" and questioned the witness extensively on this tack.

Murray charged a "blitzkrieg" is being attempted against the Wagner Labor Relations Act, that the Smith N. L. R. B. amendments were "dastardly," that they would have "disastrous" consequences on business as well as labor. He was taken to task by Senator McCarran, of Nevada, who said he was attacking the House of Representatives which passed the Smith bill.

Murray proposed that "a special educational and work program must be established for young men and women, between the ages of 15 and 25, who desire further educational opportunities and are unemployed." He opposed war "involvement," favored Western Hemisphere defense, but said defense "must not be limited to military or naval considerations."

He said he approved a proposal by Senator Byrnes for establishment of Government vocational projects in "ghost towns."

D. C. Veterans Attend Philadelphia Reunion

Twelve Washington World War veterans weer reported attending the twenty-first reunion of the Third Division, A. E. F., in Philadelphia.

The local delegation included Capt. Frank J. Jervey, Marian Kohn, Russell Sizemore, William A. Shomaker, Lieut. Col. George B. DuBois, Daniel B. Sinclair, E. L. Sullivan Grover Inglis, Sam Baumgarten, William A. Link, Thomas J. Shannon and Harry Cedar. Cedar is secretary of the Washington branch.

Travelers Expect Martinique Attack

British Only Await Reinforcements, Puerto Rico Hears

BY International News Service

San Juan, Puerto Rico, July 12.—The British fleet reported to be blockading a French naval squadron at Martinique in the French West Indies is only awaiting reinforcements before launching an attack, the first airplane passengers arriving in San Juan since the blockade was begun said tonight.

A report that United States cruisers were standing by outside the harbor circulated widely in San Juan.

Later reports stated that original estimates of the blockaded French units had been greatly underestimated. The French vessels now at Martinique, these reports said, include the aircraft carrier Bearn with 160 planes, the cruisers Jeanne d'Arc, Emile Bertin and another vessel described as a cruiser, as well as the Estrel, three submarines and other smaller craft.

The British concentrations, these reports said, are of a minor nature. French land reinforcements, it was added, have arrived from Aruba.

Five U. S. Warships Off Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, July 12 (AP).—Five United States warships were along the Brazilian coast tonight.

The cruisers Quincy and Wichita were due to arrive at Santos from Rio Grande do Sul. The destroyer O'Brien was scheduled to proceed north from Belem and the destroyers Walke and Wainwright were expected at Belem today or tomorrow.

The Walke and Wainwright are on a shakedown cruise and probably will continue to Rio de Janeiro from Belem.

Valparaiso, Chile, July 12 (AP).—The United States light cruiser Phoenix arrived here today on a good-will tour.

Chile Speeds Defense Bill

Santiago, Chile, July 12 (AP).—The Chilean government marked today for urgent congressional action a national defense bill of wide scope.

The government's announcement of the plan, which has been approved by the cabinet, said, "Our country, which has maintained and desires to preserve peace and friendship with all nations of the globe, may see these noble aims threatened unless it adopts measures necessary for the safety of its sovereignty.

"Events resulting from the European war, whose repercussions and extent cannot yet be appreciated, have obliged some countries in America to adopt measures of reasonable foresight and security to avoid the pernicious consequences produced by the abandonment of national defense."

The bill would permit the president to contract for foreign or domestic defense loans up to 1,000,000,000 pesos—$40,000,000—and to bring any commerce or industry "indispensable to the defense of the country" under state control.

The newspaper Petit Dauphinois, of Grenoble, announcing the official list, said that Petain had appointed a minister of production and industry, but that his name had not been published because he had not yet arrived in Vichy to accept the cabinet appointment.

Eliminated were such figures as Charles Pomaret from the post of minister of interior, Minister of Colonies Albert Riviere, Minister of Agriculture Albert Chichery and Minister of State Camille Chautemps.

The war ministry at Vichy today ordered demobilization on Monday of the military classes of 1916, 1917 and 1918 as well as farmers and rural artisans of the classes of 1919 through 1925 to provide more farm help.

Sunday is Bastile Day, France's national holiday, and ordinarily a day of rejoicing and great military parades, but this year it will be observed "in meditation," the official German news agency reported from Paris.

A special decree signed by Petain today ordered schoolmasters to place at the disposal of authorities all students needed for agricultural work. Boy Scouts also will be mobilized for work in the fields.

Another decree said that every Frenchman who lost his job or is in financial distress as result of joining the army is entitled to an indemnity of 1,000 francs as part of the government's program of national solidarity.

large cases protected by diplomatic seals, which they guarded every moment.

Dr. George Leisewitz, another ace Nazi propagandist in Santiago, is en route to the Pan-American Conference at Havana, presumably to attempt intellectual sabotage. His mother is Scottish and he is Cambridge-educated and has an English accent.

Another German occupies a mysterious place in the Nazi hierarchy and may be the real undercover sub-Fuehrer in this country. He is Otto von Zippellius, a retired German army major, who was recently dismissed from the post of instructor at the Chilean Carabineros School and other military establishments after the interception of a letter from him to a Gen. von Reichen in Berlin reporting on the growth of Nazism in Chile, a letter in which he signed himself chief of the district leaders of the German Nazi party in Chile.

Military experts say that the German Nazi party is organized on regular military lines with operations, communications and supply services, and with operations headquarters in southern Chile, where German colonies were established about 100 years ago.

There German Chileans today control virtually all business, agriculture, transportation and communications, including short-wave radio transmitters, in "little Germanies" where the schools, stores, homes, language and way of life are more German than Chilean.

Military Drills Held

German youths are known to hold semimilitary drills in the Sportsverein in Santiago, Valparaiso and elsewhere. It is reported retired or reserve army officers head some of these groups and lead hiking trips to remote country farms and estates owned by Germans where real military training is held.

Military experts say the Nazis could put thousands of uniformed and equipped men in the field in an emergency. The estimates vary from 5,000 to 25,000. There is believed to be no difficulty in landing arms on the long Pacific coastline or in smuggling them through remote mountain passes of the Andes or in the German-inhabited Chilean border.

Except for the prohibition on open subversive acts and public demonstrations, which is not obeyed in some places on special occasions like Chancellor Hitler's birthday, the Nazis operate without restraint, with the same setup as in Germany, including, according to reliable information, the indoctrinization of children with Nazism in German schools, the Hitler youth and labor front organizations and in meetings of German clubs and associations where Nazi flags, uniforms, swastikas and storm troops appear.

Well-informed quarters believe that if the Germans decide to take direct action they will remain in the background fomenting a revolt by Chilean Nazis to give the impression that it is a purely internal affair and attempt to tie the United States' hands by a legalistic interpretation of Washington's policy not to interfere in such affairs.

Technical Staff on Hand

If a pro-Nazi government is established it is held trained Germans would take control to prevent a counterrevolution. It is reported in military circles that at least 13 German army officers recently arrived in Chile under the guise of tourists and businessmen. In a coup they might supply the Chilean Nazi forces with a general staff such as the Germans gave Gen. Francisco Franco in the Spanish civil war.

With the Popular Front engaged in virtual class warfare with the Chilean Rightist opposition the internal situation has some similarities to Spain before the civil war, which, experts say, makes the Nazi moves more dangerous.

It is impossible to say just who constitutes the Chilean fifth column, but the Nazi efforts are reported to have been extremely successful in winning friends in certain government, army, business, press and radio circles.

The responsible heads of the government are generally regarded as sincere advocates of democracy, as friends of the United States and opposed to any foreign interference in Chilean affairs, but Nazi intrigues are said to have corrupted some minor national and local officials.

In a population like Chile's, with one of the largest German-blood colonies in South America, some officials are of German descent. Thus a German-Chilean, commanding the foreign-control section of the secert police, had immediate charge of the investigations of Nazis until recently, when his superiors promised to transfer him to other duties after protests of persons who suspected the inquiries were being sidetracked.

Many Officers Pro-German

The principal army leaders are believed to be loyal to the government, but it is reported many officers are pro-Nazi. For half a century, until recent years, the army had been trained by German military missions. The army clicks its heels and wears uniforms like Germans, has German equipment and great respect for German military efficiency. In any crisis its attitude would be a great question and probably would decide the issue.

The basic reason that makes Chile particularly vulnerable to the fifth column is economic. Dire necessity forced her submission to German barter trade before the war and will repeat after the war unless the United States finds a way to dispose of her export surpluses, according to expert opinion in Santiago. Meanwhile the wartime loss of markets creates fears of a deepening depression and growing public discontent.

Nazis are taking maximum advantage of these factors in efforts to win supporters among business men directed by the German embassy's commercial attache. German firms are serving as propaganda centers among Chilean business men, many of whom are suspectible because of the profits allowed them during prewar barter.

Nazis are urging Chileans not to buy now, predicting Germans will return to the market in September and give better prices and credits than the Americans. American firms say many orders have been cancelled. This is specially true in heavy machinery, hardware and electrical equipment, for which German catalogues are being shown.

Before the war Germans bought, besides copper and nitrates, 82 per cent of Chilean agricultural products that compete with United States products and, therefore, have no United States market. From 1930 to 1935, preceding the barter agreement, Chile had no foreign exchange and had to accept barter to get needed imports. Using the compensation mark system Germans traded heavy machinery, hospital and medical supplies, chemicals and drugs and agricultural implements to Chileans.

Barter enabled the Germans to get a $3,100,000 railway equipment order from Chile, including streamlined Diesel electric trains.

Although the United States lost trade she might have got, her exports to Chile held up fairly well because of quicker delivery, better quality and because the Chilean government made a gentleman's agreement guaranteeing the United States 85 per cent of the automobile market and a fixed radio set quota.

British Losses Greatest

Britain suffered most from the German barter in Chile. While barter brought Germany back to her old parity with the United States at about a quarter of the Chilean market each, Britain dropped from her peak of 32 per cent to 10 per cent in 1938. Early this year Britain made a barter agreement to buy £800,000 worth of Chilean wool to be compensated by British products of an equivalent value.

Immediately on the outbreak of the war Chile suffered a heavy blow when Britain decided to buy all her copper within the empire, breaking the international copper cartel that had allotted to Chile part of the world market. Whereas Chile formerly sold to Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan, only the Japanese market is left open and it is comparatively small.

Before the war Chile exported 1,500,000 tons of nitrates yearly, one-third of this to the United States. The United States and Japanese markets are still open, but Germany, France, Italy and Spain are closed.

Since virtually all Chile's eggs are in two baskets, the war has had a devastating effect on her fiscal system and has augmented social problems that always were serious in such a poor country. Decreased sales of copper and nitrates mean decreased tax revenues.

Government Income Cut

The cessation of barter exports means Chile has to seek larger imports from the United States. But the lack of international exchange means she has to curtail imports, which means lower customs revenues, normally 55 per cent of the government's income. The smaller volume of business reduced income taxes and growing unemployment with a larger need for social relief which was already increasingly difficult to finance.

Offsetting Nazi arguments that such problems can be solved only by the resumption of barter trade after the war and by the adoption of a Fascist regime to protect profits and social standards, the United States is seeking means of economic cooperation to keep Chile within the democratic sphere.

The United States Export-Import Bank has lent Chile $12,000,000, with an additional $5,000,000 from United States manufacturers. These controlled merchandise credits are to be used for capital investment for the production of new wealth in diversified industries so Chile will not have to import so much, hydroelectric plants to replace imported coal, and agricultural implements to relieve the need of importing some foodstuffs.

The need for making Chile more self-sufficient was emphasized by the aftermath of the 1938 earthquake.

U. S. Goods Liked

The United States also is preparing plans for discussion at the Havana Pan-American Conference for the United States to buy more Chilean goods, enabling Chile to get exchange with which to buy more of our goods. Chilean businessmen like the quality and durability of United States goods and would prefer buying them if they had the exchange and if the price and credit were right.

But they are "the Yankees of South America," and buy for hard-headed business reasons in which the price often is the controlling factor, especially in such a poor country. Chile and Germany complement each other economically more than Chile and the United States do.

If Germany wins, she is bound to return to the Chilean market in a big way, but Americans in Chile and pro-American Chileans hope to prevent Chile from succumbing to German economic domination, which, it is feared, would bring her under Nazi political hegemony.

Dive-Bombers CrippleBritain, Berlin Claims

London Disputes High Command's Report Of Widespread Havoc

By International News Service

Berlin, July 12.—Germany's dreaded dive-bombing Stuka planes were portrayed in Berlin tonight as swarming over Great Britain in steadily increasing numbers, spreading havoc over British shipping, docks, arms plants and other important cogs in England's defense machine.

While Britain's vital defense centers were depicted as suffering crippling blows, the daily British bombing raids over Germany and German-held areas were described as failures.

[A contrary picture emerges from London dispatches, which tell of effective, far-reaching British raids against German military objectives and of only minor military damage by German bombings.—Editor's note.]

That the time is deemed almost ripe for the heralded grand assault on Britain was indicated by figures the German high command issued today, purporting to show that the ocean commerce indispensable to the life of the sea-surrounded United Kingdom has sustained vast damage.

Huge Shipping Loss Claimed

These figures relate that no less than 4,329,213 registered tons of "enemy shipping space or shipping space useful to the enemy" have been sunk by German air and naval attacks since the war began and that more than 300 other merchant vessels have been damaged.

The dive-bombers were declared to have attacked airports, docks and arms factories in southern and middle England Thursday, as well as ships off the east and south coasts.

A big 15,000-ton oil tanker and four other merchant ships, totaling 15,000 tons, were sunk in the English Channel and nine additional commercial vessels were damaged seriously by "direct hits," the communique said.

Docks and harbor facilities at Plymouth and Lowestoft were said to have been damaged and big fires were said to have been caused by German bombs falling on industrial plants at Portsmouth.

Loss of Seven Planes Admitted

Several British pursuit planes were shot down in combat with German fighters that escorted the Stukas, the communique asserted, admitting that seven Nazi planes were lost.

From the opening of the war last September 3, up to and including last Monday, July 8, German submarines sank, with torpedoes and mines, 1,920,439 tons of hostile shipping, the high command said. German surface warships were credited with sending 1,362,461 tons to the bottom, while Nazi planes were declared to have sunk 1,046,313 tons for the total of 4,329,213 tons.

[In London, an authorized source declared the figure of 4,329,213 tons given by the Germans was in fact more than four times the total British losses to July 1, the Associated Press reported. It added that Germany had lost 877,000 tons of merchant shipping and Italy about 244,000 tons captured, sunk or scuttled—more than the total British losses since the outbreak of the war.]

Britain Enlists Ethiopians Against Italy

Haile Selassie Now Her Ally; Pledges to Restore Independence

By the Associated Press

London, July 12.—Great Britain faced about again today on Ethiopia and little, black-bearded Haile Selassie once more is recognized as Emperor of Ethiopia, Lion of Judah, and his government is a full ally against Italy.

The British will assure Ethiopian independence "when the war is won," said R. A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, today in the House of Commons.

British and those Ethiopian forces opposed to the Italian rule which was impressed on Selassie's 350,000-square-mile empire in 1935-36 are to coordinate "all activities likely to damage the enemy's effort in North and East Africa and in Abyssinia (Ethiopia)," Butler said.

Tens of thousands of Ethiopia's fierce but ill-armed warriors are in the field against Italy already.

Tribesmen Need Guns

C. W. Martin, who was Ethiopian minister to London at the time of the Italian conquest, says at least 300,000 to 400,000 of his countrymen are ready to fight Italy if they can get enough guns.

Ras Birru, who was Selassie's war minister, left Jerusalem for the Sudan June 13 to direct the fight as Selassie's commander in chief. Butler declared today that contact would be made with Ras Birru and Ethiopean Gen. Abeba Aragui "in order that British and Ethiopian forces may coordinate their activities against the Italians in Ethiopia."

Butler said it was impossible to give further details on this shift of policy, the second since British-led economic penalties (sanctions) against Italy petered out and Mussolini's legions marched to triumph in Ethiopia.

against the conquest to sanction of against the conuest to sanction of it was formalized in de jure recognition of Italy's annexation of Ethiopia in a British-Italian agreement in 1938.

In that year, while the Chamberlain and Mussolini governments were exchanging gentlemanly assurances over the status quo in the Mediterranean basin, Selassie, then an exiled emperor, was living at Bath, England, amid the memories of his Addis Ababa court. When Italy declared war, the 49-year-old Selassie moved to a West End hotel in London.

The arming of Ethiopians against their Italian conquerors would add fuel to the spreading fires of war in Africa.

The lines of friction, reach across some 2,000 miles of sun-baked desert and wild highlands, from the Mediterranean southeastward to the Indian Ocean.

Italian North Africa (Libya) is separated from other Italian East African possessions, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Italian Somaliland and newly won footholds in French Somaliland, by nonbelligerent Egypt and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The British are fighting the Italians from lonely border stations and airports in Egypt, the Sudan, Uganda, Kenya and British Somaliland.

Nazis Have Good Bombsight, Says Expert, Telling of Raids

Bendix Official, Who Instructed French In Servicing U. S. Planes, Describes Deadly Accuracy of Bombings From High Altitude

Copyright by New York Times

New York, July 12.—The first baby twins to cross the Atlantic by air, according to Pan American Airways officials, arrived at LaGuardia Field today on the Dixie clipper from Lisbon with 19 other passengers, including aviation experts, who told of the accuracy and devastation of German bombings from which all were escaping.

The bright-eyed baby sisters, Tessa and Marina Kennedy, from Daffrey Working, England, were in the care of their nurse, Mary F. Robertson, who said they were 18 months old, and accompanied by their grandmother, Mme. Milica Banac, of Yugoslavia, and Mrs. June J. Ivanovic, wife of Ivan Ivanovic, Wall Street banker and uncle of the twins.

Harold McEnness, European representative of the Bendix Aviation Corporation, returning with Frank J. Kunna and Robert Tate, who went to France June 1 to instruct the French in servicing American military planes, told of witnessing the deadly accuracy of German planes in bombing the Citroen automobile factory, about a mile from his office in Paris.

Bombing Deadly Accurate

McEnness said it was estimated that 250 German planes took part in the raid and were so high they were invisible to the naked eye. From an altitude of about 20,000 feet, he said, "only a scattered few of their bombs missed the plant, most of them falling in the center."

He was asked what sort of bomb sight they had and whether it was as good as the secret American instrument.

"There is a good possibility that they have a bomb sight as good as this country's," he said. "But the Germans have been flying over France for years, and following a compass with their eyes closed they can make direct hits."

McEnness described a German bombing formation of 50 planes in which, he said, ten leading and flank planes were well-equipped craft with expert pilots, while those in the center of the squadron were of cheap construction having little more than heavy bomb loads.

The three Bendix employes told of a hazardous seven-day bicycle ride in fleeing Paris. They rode by day and slept in barns and cow sheds at night, often going without food, although they could "always get wine." They finally reached Bordeaux and proceeded by train first to Hendaye and then to Lisbon.

McEnness said that 700 to 800 American military planes had been delivered and assembled in the past six or seven months, up to the time he left Paris. He said the Curtiss Hawk 75s had proved the best of the American craft.

Britain Yields On Burma Issue

It must be considered also that this is now the rainy season and the Burma Road would be closed, or virtually closed for the next two months, anyhow.

The British hope is that at the end of the two months the entire situation may have changed. By that time it is possible that the war in Europe may develop to a point where the British will know definitely whether or not they are going to be able to deal with the Japanese threat. There is also the possibility that the United States, at the end of two months, may feel able to give Britain some real support in the Far East, not directly, but at least by identifying their own interests with those of Britain.

Though the immediate effect of the British agreement to curtail shipments over the Burma Road is claimed here to be the smallest as far as China is concerned, the Chinese themselves apparently are not happy about it.

China Fears Future Effect

This, it would appear, is not so much because of the effect of two or three months curtailment, but because the Chinese fear it may be the preliminary to further and permanent interference with their lifeline. The British insist it does not mean anything of the sort.

At any rate, they have apparently satisfied Japan without seriously hindering the flow of United States and Russian supplies to China in the near future. And they have gained valuable time.

Two things remain to be seen. If the Japanese are really pleased with the compromise, there are many people here who believe they will decide they are betting on a good horse and make further demands. The second problem is what Russia, which has been supplying Japan over the Burma Road, will have to say about it.

Steamer Explodes; 21 Saved After Drifting Two Days

Astoria, Oreg., July 12 (U.P.).—Twenty-one weary and half-starved crew members of the Greek steamer Hellenic Skipper, which exploded and sank 140 miles south of Aberdeen, Wash., were landed here late today by two Coast Guard lifeboats.

One member of the crew was severely burned.

The ship caught fire Wednesday morning. Flames apparently ate into the fuel storage tanks and within a few minutes the vessel exploded.

Capt. Panais Danalis and his 20 men piled into the only lifeboat and gathered a meager supply of provisions, the rescue crew reported.

Red Cross Ship Nearing France With Supplies

The American Red Cross "mercy ship," the SS McKeesport, carrying a million dollar relief cargo for the sick and needy in France, yesterday passed Gibraltar en route to Marseille, France, it was announced at national headquarters here.

The ship is awaited at Marseille by Richard Allen, Paul Thorn and William Giblin, American Red Cross workers, who will distribute the sorely needed supplies to several million refugees in southern France.

National headquarters, meantime, announced the war relief fund stood at $18,804,351, nearing the last lap toward the minimum goal of $20,000,000.

The District of Columbia Chapter reported a contribution of $962 from Dale McDonough, United States Consul General in Monterrey, Mexico, who wrote the American colony there had raised this sum for a Fourth of July celebration, but had voted to give it to the Red Cross.

Germans Take Norway's Food, Says Hambro

Storting President Sees His Countrymen Facing Grim Winter

Copyright by New York Times

New York, July 12.—Large stores of grain and potatoes have been removed from Norway to Germany, thus making the outcome of the approaching winter infinitely grim for the Norwegians, C. J. Hambro, for the past 15 years president of the Norwegian Parliament, the Storting, declared today in an interview.

Hambro, who arrived in Halifax, Nova Scotia, Wednesday after crossing the ocean on a Norwegian freighter from Scotland, said Norway was in the habit of importing an average of 3,000,000 tons of coal from Great Britain every year.

"Now, where is this coal going to come from," he asked. "Wood cannot be used for central heating. It must be dry and must have been cut down at least one year in advance. Norway has no fuel, either."

Denying that the Norwegian Parliament may meet soon to depose King Haakon, the statesman expressed the view that the Germans were not in the constitutional position to summon the Storting.

"On our last meeting on April 8," he stated, "all members of Parliament agreed unanimously to take any steps that would make possible for His Majesty's government to continue its functions abroad."

The entire Norwegian broadcasting system and complete control over the press have been taken over by the invaders, he asserted.

"Hotels and restaurants have had the strictest order to listen in only to German broadcasts," he said, "and all non-Aryans have had to turn in their radio sets."

Maj. Vidkun Quisling, who betrayed his country to the Germans, has very little influence in Norway, Hambro claimed. "In the last election, in 1936, Quisling's party got only 28,000 votes, and most of them were cast by spinsters who dreamed of the Nazi he-men, and by the unemployed," he asserted.

The statesman plans to see President Roosevelt after the end of the Democratic Convention.

Defense Tax Foes Enemies of U. S., Legionnaire Says

Those who would grumble over payment of new national defense taxes have no more place in the United States than "fifth columnists" and advocates of foreign "isms," said James Blaine Fitzgerald, national vice commander of the American Legion. He spoke yesterday before the Washington Round Table at the National Press Club.

Fitzgerald called upon every American citizen to "unite for the United States" and to stand squarely behind our program to preserve peace by preparedness.

Reich Ties to Baltic States ReportedCut

New York, July 12 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Corporation reported tonight in a French-language broadcast heard here by N. B. C. that all communication between Germany and the three Baltic states (presumably Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia) has been severed for the last few days.

The announcement, credited to the official Danish radio, said all rail and motor traffic also had been suspended.

ously close to involvement in the European war.

The American Red Cross could not send ships to England for the children, experts pointed out, without Congressional action amending the Neutrality Act. As the law stands United States boats cannot enter the combat zone drawn around the British Isles.

But if a way is found to get the children here Washington will be ready to do its share in taking care of them. Members of the Washington branch of the United States Committee for the care of European Children, meeting yesterday afternoon in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, elected Mrs. John Jay O'Connor president, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, director of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, was chosen vice president, and Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the Council of Social Agencies, secretary.

Mrs. Stuart Rice, named chairman of the committee on information, announced that persons who request refugee children are faced with the task of keeping them for the duration of their stay in this country, or until the children reach their majority.

Working on Mrs. Rice's committee are John Mixon, Mrs. A. F. Hinrichs, Mrs. Carlos Belt and Mrs. R. A. McGee.

The child care committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Milton King, are Maj. Charles Dodd, Morris Kloss, Msgr. Laurence Shehan, Miss Patricia Morse, Miss Mildred Terrell, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Mrs. W. C. Van Vleck, Mrs. Frank Lingell and Mrs. Olive Swinney.

Bruce Mohler is chairman of the immigration committee which includes Miss Elizabeth Eastman, Issoore Hershfield, Miss Alice Jones and Mrs. Greta Lenz. The publicity committee includes Earl Nash, chairman, Herbert Willett, William Savin and Miss Anne T. Swindell.

Meetings of the entire committee will be held the second and fourth Thursdays of the month at 4 p. m. at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Submarine Believed Sunk

Manhattan Leaves Lisbon

New York, July 12 (AP).—The United States liner Manhattan radioed today that she had sailed from Lisbon for New York with 796 passengers. The liner made the voyage under State Department orders to pick up Americans fleeing the war.

Davis-Boyer Duo Jams the Earle For 'All This and Heaven Too'

Picturized Novel Is Enthusiastically Greeted by Crowds; Stage Bill Is Brief

"ALL THIS AND HEAVEN TOO," Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by Rachel Field, adapted to the screen by Casey Robinson, costarring Bette Davis and Charles Boyer, with Jeffrey Lynn, Barbara O'Neil, Virginia Weidler, Helen Westley, Walter Hampden, Henry Daniell, Harry Davenport, George Coulouris, Montagu Love, Janet Beecher, June Lockhart, Ann Todd, Fritz Leiber, Ian Keith, Sibyl Harris, Edward Fielding, Mary Anderson, Ann Gillis, Victor Kilian and Mrs. Gardner Crane. Directed by Anatole Litvak. At the Earle Theater.

Washington's appreciation of the opportunity to view the Warner Brothers picturization of Rachel Field's novel of "All This and Heaven Too" as a popular-price attraction at the Earle, while it is being presented as a "road show" in other cities, yesterday was expressed by the attendance of crowds that overflowed the capacity of the theater at every performance. It was a deserved tribute to the superlative merit of the picture and the sagacity of its local sponsors.

BELL

"All This and Heaven Too" is a film production into which the full resources of the Burbank studios have been thrown. It is less important that the picture runs almost two hours and a half, and was made at a reputed cost of $1,850,000, than that it reflects punctilious care in preparation, superb direction and the finest work of which a cast of Hollwood's most distinguished artists is capable.

The story is not a continuously happy one, nor is it always gloomy. Its overtones are tragic, but its major premise is the preservation of those qualities of mind that deserve to survive twisted and misunderstood relationships and events. It is a story, furthermore, against which charges of imaginative extravagance cannot be lodged, since it is based on actual experience in the life of the author's great-aunt, who, as an English governess in the home of French aristocrats, suffered the same injustices that are triumphantly endured by Henriette Deluzy Desportes on the screen.

These injustices are the outgrowth of the maddening neuroticism of the Duchesse de Praslin, an irascible and unnatural mother, estranged from her husband, the Duc de Praslin, by an insuperable emotional barrier. When Henriette Desportes enters their home, her gentleness, kindness and unobtrusive service to the disturbed household win the immediate love and respect of the four children and their harassed father. This chaste mutual admiration is magnified into a colossal scandal by the Duchesse and the dignitaries intent upon shielding their associate in the House of Peers from the stigma of an illicit "affair." The climax of the action is reached in the murder of the Duchesse, the trial of the Duc and Henriette and the suicide of Praslin to insure the acquittal of the woman to whom he owes so deep a debt.

An examination of the cast will be sufficient assurance of the high quality of the acting that illuminates a closely integrated and vivid drama. Bette Davis, in the role of Henriette, offers a characterization that is powerful in its simplicity and restrained emotionalism. It is on a par, or better, with any that ever won her an Academy award—and might win her another. Charles Boyer, in the costellar role of the Duc de Praslin, ceases to be a romantic lover in this subject and assumes new stature as an actor of most substantial endowment. No less brilliant than the costars is Barbara O'Neil, as the hapless Duchesse. Her performance is one of the outstanding achievements of this or any other season. Her bewildered and harried children are flawlessly impersonated by Virginia Weidler, June Lockhart, Ann Todd and an uncommonly naive and plaintive little fellow by the name of Richard Nichols.

While these principals divide the major honors of the film among them, the supporting cast is in no sense less competent. Particiularly effective portrayals are contributed to an extraordinary ensemble by Harry Davenport, the aged servitor in the home of the de Praslins; Walter Hampden, as president of the House of Peers; Ian Keith, chief prosecutor; Montagu Love, the meddling, martinet father of the Duchesse; Fritz Leiber, the Abbe Gallard; Jeffrey Lynn, Henriette's self-appointed guardian in times of stress, and a long list of others.

Anatole Litvak has directed this notable assemblage with unerring skill through a production that is complete and believable to the minutest detail.

Since the screen feature is of unusual length, the stage bill, by the same token, is unusually brief. It is, however, of comparable excellence. It is opened by the Roxyettes in a beautifully staged "Spanish Shawl" number that introduces Betty Bruce, an exceptional dancer, recruited from the vacationing cast of "Keep Off the Grass," the Jimmy Durante musical hit. A mixed double-quartet, "The New Yorkers," scores tremendously in a short cycle of songs and Jeannie Lanier does likewise as soloist in the Roxyettes' astonishing tap routine on stilts. Newsreel and cartoon comedy—when there is time to squeeze them in—complete a bill that is an enormous amusement bargain.

"Four Sons," Bob Crosby Band Spark Capitol's Contrasted Bill

By Richard L. Coe

"FOUR SONS," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by I. A. R. Wylie, adapted to the screen by John Howard Lawson, with Don Ameche, Eugenie Leontovich, Mary Beth Hughes, Alan Curtis, George Ernest, Robert Lowery, Lionel Royce, Sig Rumann, Ludwig Stossel, Chrustian Rub, Torben Meyer, Egon Brecher, Eleanor Wesselhoft and Michael Visaroff. Directed by Archie Mayo. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Distinguished by several compelling characterizations, "Four Sons," the Capitol's new film, is an interesting remake of a 1928 picture on war's futility, brought up to our times by the collapse of Czecho-Slovakia and the fall of Poland.

On the Capitol stage is a razzle-dazzle swing fete by Bob Crosby and his Dixieland Band, an experience in exuberant rhythm to set the most hesitant tapping. All in all, tuned to our times in stunned misery and youthful clamor, the Capitol's bill is downright entertaining, contrasting as its screep and stage offerings so emphatically are.

Inevitably one must compare "Four Sons" with "The Mortal Storm," that film of the rise of Nazi-ism which preceeded this picture by only a few weeks. In the first place, "Four Sons" seems more tragically of today with its scenes taking one from the Austrian Anschluss through the fall of Warsaw It take up with Herr Hitler's slaves four years after "The Mortal Storm" started him to his lonely heights. Consequently, the feeling that this, alas, happened so long ago, which one sensed during "The Mortal Storm," gives way to a suggestion of what must now be occurring in fascist France, this eve of Bastile Day.

Some Commendable Playing

Further to its credit in this story of a Czech mother and her four sons is some carefully conceived acting and a warm undercurrent of deeply sincere scripting by John Howard Lawson. In her first screen role, Eugenie Leontovich, noted on the stage for her gleaming sophisticates, is excellent as the sorely tried mother, who, twice in her life, had received cold metal medals for rich young lives, given in service for the Fatherland. This symbolism makes its mark clearly while not overstepping the bounds of sentiment.

Blonde, chubby Mary Beth Hughes is exactly right as the faithful young wife, bound to love and honor her husband blindly. One is made to feel a definite sympathy for her and her husband, a marked attempt to improve on the unrelieved villainy of "The Mortal Storm's" Nazis. Alan Curtis is commendable as the husband. Don Ameche, George Ernest and Robert Lowery play the other brothers.

There is more melodrama, more blood and thunder in "Four Sons" than in "The Mortal Storm." The restrained quality of the earlier film has given way to a more rousing pitch. There are several scenes which may seem too tightly stretched, but, because of its terrible reflection of what must be civilized France today, "Four Sons" is a deeply engrossing photoplay.

Big Noise of Winnetka"

Bing's brother, Bob, leads his orchestra, his Bob Cats and his airland favorites in a generous assortment of stomps, rolls and disheveled rhythms. It's infectious and fun, particularly when an audience of youthful jitterbugs, etc., is on hand to further your enthusiasm. What a drummer and bass fiddler don't do to "Big Noise of Winnetka" shouldn't be done. Those three boys from the band do their madly funny Fan Dance and Dorris Day sings sizzling verse in the most effortless manner imaginable.

Juggler Bob DuPont is back with his clowning, Rolly and Verna Pickert jitterbug on stilts and remind you that all jitterbugs look as though they might be on stilts. The Collegians, who actually look like collegians, tumble in novel fashions that seem to have been learned on the beach and not under the big top from the tumbling hierarchy.

Good Old Siwash Comes Back To Life in Metropolitan Film

"THOSE WERE THE DAYS," Paramount picturization of a screen play by Don Hartman, based on the George Fitch "Siwash" stories, featuring William Holden, Bonita Granville, Ezra Stone and Judith Barrett, with Vaughan Glaser, Lucien L. Littlefield, Richard Denning, Phillip Terry, Wilda Bennett, Janet Waldo, Betty McLaughlin, Kay Stewart, Tom Rutherford, James Dodd, Aldrich Bowker, James Seay, Douglas Kennedy and others. Produced and directed by J. Theodore Reed. At the Metropolitan Theater.

College life used to be designed for fun. It was four years of horsing around, matching wits or half-wits with the faculty and occasional seances of preexamination cramming. "Those Were the Days" is the perfect title of a picturing of this kindergarten period of the American university. It's based on those hilarious "Siwash" stories by George Fitch that appeared in the Saturday Evening Post too long ago.

Those Siwash boys. Were they the cards! You see 'em stealing street cars, impersonating coppers, faking arson, inciting to riot and jail-breaking, making the freshmen tip their hats and bow, picking their "dates" out of a hatful of chances. There's a Betty Co-Ed, too, sporting a string of fraternity pins and giving all the boys that Southern accent stuff.

William Holden is given a flashy but difficult role, with a taint of the rubber stamp. He's the too-fresh freshman who antagonizes friends and acquaintances with cockiness and practical jokes. Back in 1904 it seems to have been very witty to wear boutonnieres that sprayed water in people's eyes and to balance buckets of water on top of doors. But in spite of such repulsive pranks, it is indicated that Hero Holden is really quite a guy. Best of his escapades is the sequence where he gets tangled up with the works of the campus clock.

Two Devastating Dames

Bonita Granville is pretty and appealing as Holden's girl friend. But there's more of a dizzy sparkle to Judith Barrett as the Dixie belle, who likes all the boys. Balance of the acting laurels go to Ezra Stone as little Allie Bangs who says "All the calculus I know could be written on a piece of granite and put into my eye and I'd never know it."

Though "Those Were the Days" is a lightweight celluloid, the supporting shorts are superior. Ted Husing has a little opus on life-saving that's something new in swim pictures. It shows how to make a surface dive and get the right hold on a drowning person, how to break a dangerous stranglehold and the surfboard rescue technique used on the West Coast.

Leon Errol is out in front with a comedy about fortune tellers and loan sharks. The color cartoon is another amusing item—all about the tangling of a mouse, a worm and a barn owl. The newsreel isn't exactly thrilling, but is enriched by a "father and son" sequence dealing with France's troubles and the American situation. It's a pity that such laudable sentiments are expressed with a degree of stuffiness.

Hollywood, July 12.

Walter Wanger will get back ten times the $50,000 he spent bringing these famous American artists to the coast to do the characters and scenes from "The Long Voyage Home." Paintings will be shown not only in the leading theaters, but in art galleries throughout the country, and from what I hear, they're really something. I call that showmanship. Many producers would have been satisfied with a fine story by Eugene O'Neill, direction by John Ford, and an all-star cast—but not Walter. He aims to give you more than your money's worth. And that's what every producer's got to do these days if he wants to keep the patrons coming to the picture theaters.

HOPPER

Sam Goldwyn, back from New York, where he started Dr. Gallup, of that poll, on a survey of the picture business, which is a might step in the right direction, is more proud of a check for a thousand dollars from the Saturday Evening Post, for a story he's writing than he would be at a profit if $50,000 on a picture. When I asked who was ghost-writin it, Sam shooshed the question right off the record.

When the "Return of Frank James" company was up on the boiling hot desert at Sonora, Calif., waiting for that ancient prop locomotive—No. 18—to pull up enough steam to look like the Puffing Billy the director wanted, poor old No. 18 was so decrepit it just couldn't oblige. So, at Henry Fonda's suggestion, the prop men bought a huge cake of dry ice, put it inside the locomotive, and old No. 18 perked up its ears, put out more steam than a modern streamliner, and the day was saved!

Did you know that Noah Beery has a mine on the Mojave Desert from which aluminum silicate is taken? It's used for commercial soap, and used almost entirely in laundries.

Fifteen per cent of the commercial soap used in the Los Angeles district is from that mine. He also has a trout hatchery, the biggest privately owned one in this part of the country—June Story, Gene Autry's leading lady, (who walks exactly like Jean Arthur), wears a silver link chain bracelet with small silver sombreros on every other link.

Remember young "Spec" O'Donnell, who began in the "Our Gang" comedies, and later played the well-meaning but wrong-doing office boy in pictures? "Spec" worked hard to maintain his position—so hard that he became ill, was bedridden for years.

Public forgot him, but the studio where he was once famous remembered. Today "Spec" O'Donnell is a real office boy on the Warner lot, where he used to act. He's learning the business from the ground up, and expects to get into the production end. That's what I call intestinal fortitude.

Wendy Barrie is carrying on a two-man romance these days, and here's how it works. She stays at home until ten p. m., for her nightly phone call from Georges Herfascu (the Rumanian steel man), in New York, and then goes out with Lee Sterling, the Hollywood boy friend.

Hollywood directors can give their workers the darndest problems. Mike Curitz, director of "The Sea Hawk," told Songwriter Erich Korngold he wanted a number in the picture for Brenda Marshall. He said, "She's sad because she's in love. But she's smiling because she doesn't want him to know she's sad. She has tears in her eyes, but she's happy. Give me a song like that."

And the funny part is—that's what he got! Song is tentatively called "Love is Like That."

Arthur Murray, when asked if he thought a certain actress well dresesd, cracked, "Well, she's never been chic a day in her life."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 12.

LAST WEEK the operators of the Republic Theater on Forty-second street—which presents burlesque shows—were startled to discover that among the 11 a. m. customers were Marquis James, the biographer who was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for his life of Sam Houston, "The Raven" . . . Mr. James was accompanied by Louis Nizer, the Paramount lawyer, and a stenographer . . . The burlesque show producers were flattered at such distinguished patronage. As a matter of fact, however, the men were there to secure evidence in a law suit being brought by James because of a movie called "Man of Conquest"—a story allegedly based upon the Houston biography. The stenographer was making a record of the script. And James and his lawyer were in that burlesque house that morning because it was the only New York theater where "Man of Conquest" was shown.

ANDRE MAUROIS, the French novelist, is coming to America shortly for a lecture tour . . . Alfred Hitchcock will bring his talents to the radio on July 22. He will adapt his movie technique to a C. B. S. radio show called "Suspense," starring Herbert Marshall. If that performance is satisfactory, it will be extended into a serial . . . Gene Autry, the cowboy star, has been signed for the Rodeo in New York. He will receive $4,500 a week, for 3 weeks . . . Joan Crawford still nursing the wound from her appearance in Sam Goldwyn's production of "Rain," will seek redemption in a Broadway revival of that show. She plans to produce and star in it.

SAMMY RENICK, the jockey, came up from Louisville in Mrs. Sloane's private train. Prince Mike Ramanoff was one of the guests aboard the car, and he noticed Renick and other jockeys playing rummy for 10 cents a game . . . "Mind if I sit in?" asked Prince Mike . . . Renick invited him to join and after a long session, Romanoff lost 80 cents. Mike coughed, and stalled—until Renick finally demanded: "Come on, Duke—where's the 80 cents, Duke." . . . "I'm sorry, but frankly I haven't 80 cents on my person," Prince Romanoff confessed. "And it isn't 'Duke'—it's 'Prince.'"

BECAUSE BEATRICE LILLIE expressed interest in a show called "The Genii," Lee Shubert purchased an option on the production rights, and cabled Miss Lillie that he has the play waiting for her. Bea cabled her reply: "Gielgud and self going on six weeks' tour for troops. Hitler willing, sailing America September 1" . . . Benny Goodman arrived Wednesday for medical observation. His sister, Ethel, is supervising his band's activities in Hollywood during his absence . . . For the first time in years, the Paramount Theater will present a movie made by a rival company—Universal's newest hit, "The Boys From Syracuse."

WHEN DOROTHY THOMPSON went to Paris recently, she visited Henry Bernstein, the French playwright, at his office in the new theater he had built . . . "Let's get away from the war," Bernstein told her, "so I'll tell you a story which is not a war story" . . . He told her the story which appeared in this column some weeks ago—of the man who sat in his office naked, but wearing a hat. "Why shouldn't I be naked? I'm not expecting anyone," the man stated. When he was asked to explain why he was wearing the hat, he said: "Oh, that's in case someone should drop in" . . . Miss Thompson listened to the story attentively, and then told Bernstein: "But that IS a war story." . . . "In what way?" asked the playwright . . . "Because," replied the columnist. That man is the Allies."

MAYOR EDWARD J. KELLY of Chicago, who will be host at the Democratic Convention, doesn't believe that the voters would elect a utilities chief to the Presidency of this country. "If Willkie ever is elected," said Kelly, "that would be adding Insult to injury" . . . As the trade-mark for the new John Barrymore movie, "The Great Profile," Darryl Zanuck intends to use a bust of Barrymore, made by Henriette Kaye, the sculptress. In that bust, Miss Kaye showed Barrymore as a drunken Mephistopheles . . . Two people now are negotiating, via a local attorney, for the reward in revealing the whereabouts of the missing Judge Crater. The lawyer, as did so many others, has confidence.

THE MEN IN CHARGE of solving the bombing at the British Pavilion are investigating "radicals," and have amassed a fancy list. Among those listed for questioning are certain correspondents who spoke at a meeting of the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign on April 25—because the investigators assume that the mere fact that they had made speeches at this meeting deserves further inquiry . . . Among the speakers were W. H. Auden, Joseph Barnes, Cesar Searchinger, Jay Allen, Robert Dell and Quincy Howe . . . But the dinner was held to commemorate the withdrawal of ardent left-wingers from the relief campaign. All of the speeches, except one, were pro-Ally. Two of the speakers have been denounced frequently by the New Masses and Daily Worker. And two of them are members of William Allen White's Committee to Aid the Allies.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 12 (INS).—Remember Danielle Darrieux, the little French girl who made such a hit in "The Rage of Paris," her sole American picture? She left Hollywood and Universal and never came back. At the time she was reported as not being too complimentary to our town. But you can usually take those comments with a grain of salt. As I understand it the little Darrieux didn't understand some of the questions put to her.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Well, anyhow, Darrieux is making a picture at the moment in England for RKO under the direction of William Sistrom and RKO plans to bring her over in the early fall to appear in a picture to be produced by David Hempstead—but, there's a little catch in the RKO-American deal. Darrieux is still under contract to Universal and there may be fireworks—just as there is in the case of Robert Donat who cannot come to Hollywood for M-G-M because Edward Small will sue him at the drop of a hat.

Bill Holden, who became a star from the moment he left the choir of the Congressional Church in South Pasadena and joined the movies, has just been given an assignment to his liking. He and Ray Milland will be costarred in "I Wanted Wings," a timely epic dealing with the training of Army fliers. Arthur Hornblow, who was to have produced a Polish refugee story with Bill, has discarded it in favor of the "Wings" drama, which I think is infinitely better, for we have had too many tear-jerkers.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random; Jinx Falkenberg and Al Jolson are seen everywhere in New York together and Hollywood couldn't be more interested; Greta Garbo, no less, took a look at Bette Davis in "All This and Heaven Too" at the Carthay Circle; Ray Milland's 8-year-old nephew is arriving here for the duration of the war; Eddie and Gladys Robinson will attend the Democratic Convention in Chicago. Warners have signed a new gal named Joan Brodell but it's being changed on account of it's too much like Joan Blondell; Franklin Roosevelt, jr., was offered a job as a movie star but he thought maybe his father might not approve.

Joan Bennett has had a marvelous personal appearance offer at womens clubs and auditoriums, to speak on Hollywood. Think it would be a good idea. There is too little good said about our town; if Melvyn Douglas cannot get away for the Democratic Convention in Chicago, his wife, Helen Gahagan, will represent him.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Balkan Tangle Stays Nazi Invasion, London Believes

Soviet Move to Oust Turkey From Straits Expected in Britain

By Raymond Daniell.
Copyright by New York Times

London, July 12.—While half the able-bodied men of Britain are drilling with broomsticks and patrolling nightly with ax handles, in preparation for an invasion assisted by the "fifth column," diplomatic circles here believe that Adolf Hitler is turning his attention at the moment to the southeast, where it is believed Turkey is singled out as the next victim of the Russian squeeze play.

With most of Europe under his military domination, accumulating evidence shows that Hitler is trying to bring the Balkan states under his control before embarking on any large scale attack upon this country. Of course, nobody knows where the Nazi leader will strike next, but in the guessing in which this nation is engaged, one bet is about as good as another.

A Soviet move to oust Turkey from her position as guardian of the Straits would cause little surprise in diplomatic circles here.

Russia's Traditional Claims

Russia traditionally wants control of the Bosphorus, Marmora Sea and the Dardanelles. In the World War, they were promised her by the British and French, but that promise was not kept because Russia dropped out of the war. Now, it is believed, Josef Stalin thinks the moment has come to demand effective control of the Straits.

It can be said with a reasonable degree of certainty that no ultimatum has been presented to Turkey yet but that feelers have met a firm rebuff from Ankara. However, Stalin is reported to have been shopping around both in Berlin and here in search of someone to support his claims.

Turkey is bound by a mutual assistance pact with Britain and France but she exercised the escape clause when Italy entered the war. Obviously, it would be impossible for Turkey to resist effectively if Germany and Russia combined against her.

Russo-German Break Doubted

Diplomatic circles here doubt whether any tangled problems of the Near East Balkans will bring Russia and Germany into serious opposition, pointing out that regardless of how mutually distasteful each other's moves in that quarter of the world may be, Hitler and Stalin, of necessity, must grin and bear it.

Having solidified the Russian position defensively in the Baltic states and Finland, Stalin is believed now to be devoting his attention to the opening of the gates of his Black Sea ports.

It is a safe assumption that Berlin is watching developments in negotiations between Moscow and Ankara with as keen interest as London, for it is doubtlessly hoped in the German capital that developments there may complete the estrangement between Russia and Britain and drive Turkey to move away from her British alliance, which does not cover war with Russia.

Turkey "Will Rise as One Man"

Ankara, Turkey, July 12 (AP).—Turkey is in no danger, Premier Refik Saydam told the National Assembly today, but will "rise as one man" against any menace which may in the future appear.

Saydam spoke sharply of Germany's recent use of captured French documents purporting to show that Turkey, in violation of her treaty of friendship with Russia, conspired with Britain and France last spring for an attack on the Soviets.

The Assembly showed its approval with a unanimous vote of confidence and cheered not only Saydam, but his foreign minister, Sukru Sarakoglu, who negotiated Turkey's mutual assistance pact with Britain and France.

Fr. Divine Finds No Peace in D. C.

every important movement of Father Divine had to be photographed. Coupled with this, two heavenly stenographers had difficulty to keep at his elbow—for every word he uttered was recorded.

Later Father Divine was to say, "It is terrible," but while he stood in the rain in the huddle a member of the heavenly host elbowed in, saying, "Peace, Father," and it appeared to give him some comfort.

He had known no peace since his arrival, to learn right off the bat that Congress was not in session. For half an hour the heavenly limousine and bus ran around the block of F, Thirteenth street, Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street northwest. Finally the bus stopped in front the National Press Club and was chased off by police.

The driver said she would continue to drive around the block until the heavenly limousine somehow caught up. Then the limousine arrived and parked where the bus had been and Father Divine, composed but bewildered by the movement round and round, gave orders to proceed to the Senate Office Building.

Proceeds to Wagner's Office

Before he arrived, one carload of angels was at work removing car banners—which announced such matters as "Peace to you," and "It's great to be an American"—and the bus pulled up, into a cordon of Capitol police.

When police finally arranged parking places for the caravan, Father Divine, preceded by his cameramen, who changed from still shots to movies, entered the Office Building and was swarmed upon by autograph seekers. These he signed "Reverend M. J. Divine."

Straight then to Senator Wagner's office he went, followed by his sectaries and two husky angels, carrying four tremendous boxes containing the petitions. There he explained his plan for the unification of the 21 American republics, this matter being joined with the anti-lynching petition.

Then he posed for photographers and said he had no plans for anything else immediately in Washington, and that he might spend the night here, or return to heaven, by way of Philadelphia and the Holland Tunnel.

Nazis Capture Trainload of Tanks

Planes Routed British Fleet, Italians Claim

lini writes, "have on the 9th sustained victoriously the first encounter with the British fleet in the Mediterranean off Punto Stilo. The attempted British maneuvers have failed. The valor of which you have given proof before an adversary of superior force and has taught the enemy by the pointed salvos of your cannon that one cannot come with impunity near the coast of Italy. The Italian people are proud of the results of this first battle. I pay tribute to you with equal pride."

Virginio Gayda, writing in Giornale D'Italia, said that the "major victory" by the fleet "means that the British fleet is bottled up and that England can no longer receive supplies from the Balkans and the Near East."

Accredited Italian war correspondents with the fleet sent back today dispatches to their papers in which they asserted that the Italian fleet in the encounter in the Ionian Sea, met an enemy force consisting of three battleship sof the Barham class of 31,000 tons each, several large cruisers, an airplane carrier and numerous destroyers.

Planes Launch Torpedoes

The opposing Italian forces, they said, had only two battleships, the Giulio Cesare and the Cavour, a division of 10,000-ton cruisers and some destroyers. Contact with the enemy lasted an hour, they said, and fire was opened at about a 16-mile range before the British steamed away.

These Italian war correspondents write that the attempt of British torpedo-carrying planes to launch torpedoes 50 yards above sea level while hiding behind smoke screens that they themselves laid down, was particularly interesting. Italian warships zigzagged and avoided the torpedoes, they said. This attack by torpedo-carrying planes, they said, was the last phase of the battle in which the enemy was already on the run.

According to the congratulatory messages of Gen. Pricolo to his airmen, more than 300 Italian planes took part in the two battles in the Ionian Sea and near the Balearic Islands.

The only somber note in the press today was the publication of a casualty list for the air force containing the names of 76 dead, 103 wounded and 75 missing.

14 Greek Ships Sunk

Athens, July 12.—The ministry of marine announced today that in June, 14 Greek vessels amounting to 61,665 tons were sunk in northern waters, principally around the Cape of Finisterre and in the Mediterranean, off Pantelleria. This is the first time a communique of this nature has been given out.

Doll 'Adoption' Center Opens At Church Today

A line will form at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church at 9 a. m. today because children want dolls, even by adoption.

Most of the children in the Central Library area are expected to attend the opening of the doll adoption center, sponsored by the Washington Council of Church Women of the Churches' Federation.

Incidental recreation programs will continue a week and open daily at 9 a. m. Participating organizations are Mount Vernon Place, National City Christian, First Congregational, Epiphany Episcopal, New York Avenue Presbyterian, Calvary Baptist, Luther Place Memorial and Augustana Lutheran Churches and Temple Center, at Temple Baptist Church.

Six Women Perish, 'Firebug' Hunted

Cincinnati, July 12 (AP).—Cincinnati's worst institutional fire in nearly 30 years killed six women residents of the Holy Family Home today and authorities, listing property damage at $50,000, launched immediate search for a suspected incendiarist.

At least seven persons—five police and firemen and two women residents of the Catholic haven for the aged and infirm—were injured. Thirty other inmates were rescued, some by ropes lowered from windows when iron fire escapes along the three-story brick walls glowed white under the intense heat.

Roosevelt to Call Up 50,000 Guards for Army Training

ing on the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

One of the chief missions of the Guard, he indicated, would be to aid in training more than 300,000 men who might be drafted into service this fall under the compulsory training plan.

Gen. Marshall suggested one major change in the Burke-Wadsworth bill—a training period of 18 instead of 8 months. He added that the War Department "would compromise at 15 months."

Sheppard Expects Action

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, told reporters after yesterday's hearing that he is confident "some sort" of compulsory military training bill will be favorably reported by his committee.

He indicated that the final committee draft would not differ widely from the pending bill. Work on the measure will go forward next week, he stated, so that prompt action will be possible when Congress reassembles July 22 after the Democratic Convention.

Under the Burke-Wadsworth bill, men from 21 to 45 would be liable to training and service in the Army or Navy, with about 85 per cent of these drafted drawn from the 21-31 age group. Deferments of service would be granted on the basis of dependents and the importance of various civil occupations in the national defense picture. Men from 18 to 21 and 45 to 65 would be available for home defense duties.

Testimony of the chief of staff and high War Department officials yesterday outlined for the first time a broad picture of the bill's immediate effect on the Nation's manpower. Assuming enactment of the bill in August and Congressional authorization for President Roosevelt to order out National Guard units, the new Army would begin to take shape along these lines:

Plans Outlined

Within two weeks after passage of the bill, a clerical force of 700,000 would be ready to conduct registration in 135,000 precinct voting places throughout the country.

First group to register would be the men from 21 to 31, estimated to number 11,500,000. If necessary, all could be registered on a single day.

From this vast pool local selection boards would immediately begin designation for active service of the first draft, primarily men without dependents or positions in key defense industries.

By October, 300,000 to 400,000 men would be ready for duty. Most of them would be assigned to bring the Regular Army and National Guard units up to full strength. The Army's present strength is 249,000, against an authorized figure of 375,000. The National Guard, which now numbers 225,000, has an authorized strength of 240,000 men.

In April another 300,000 to 400,000 men would be called up under the selective service plan, while by October, 1941, equipment would be available for 600,000 more troops.

Witnesses estimated the cost of the bill's operation during the fiscal year 1941 at approximately $1,000,000,000. This figure is based on a basic monthly pay of $21 for the trainees, which is advocated by the War Department, rather than the $5 proposed in the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

Gen. Marshall told the committee he did not believe essential expansion of the Army and National Guard can be carried out "with minimum loss of time" by the present system of voluntary enlistment. He added that there is no more democratic method of supplying the Army's needs than by compulsory selective service.

Gen. William E. Shedd, assistant chief of staff, emphasized that no men would be called up until equipment, barracks, uniforms and officer personnel are available in adequate numbers. He said selection of men for service must be carried out along lines which "will not disrupt the national economy."

Few for Navy at Present

The Navy will draw only a "very small" number of men from the pool during the first months of the act's operation, according to Rear Admiral Chester W. Mimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

On completion of the present authorized building program, however, the Navy will require a personnel of about 400,000, he said, adding that the voluntary system would be "heavily strained" to supply this number. The Navy now has 146,000 men.

Lieut. Col. Edward L. White, national president of the Reserve Officers Association, said that unless compulsory service legislation were enacted, "what now seems like a potential emergency would become a national disaster."

Treasury Warns Tax Profiteers

The wage-hour administrator also cited General Order No. 13, issued by the Army chief of ordnance on November 15, 1917, "when the United States was at the height of its procurement effort."

This General Order stated:

"Industrial history proves that reasonable hours, fair working conditions, and a proper wage scale are essential to high production. In the war every attempt should be made to conserve in every way possible all of our achievements in the way of social betterment.

Contribute to Efficiency

"But the pressing argument for maintaining industrial safeguards in the present emergency is that they actually contribute to efficiency. To waive them would be a shortsighted policy, leading gradually but inevitably toward lowered production."

Maj. Fleming wrote further that the French 40-hour week had little resemblance to the American "ceiling for hours," now 42 per week, but scheduled to drop to 40 on October 24.

Elaborating on this point in a broadcast last night, Col. Fleming said that while the American law places no limit on the number of hours that may be worked so long as the extra pay is given for overtime, the French law cut the work week from 48 to 40 hours as "a hard and fast limitation" for most industry. The French law also required the same wages for 40 hours as had been paid for 48, "a real shock to French industry."

Discounts "Armchair Generals"

He took issue with the "armchair generals" who hold the 40-hour week was "disastrous for France and are now seeking a longer work week here.

In the letter to the President, Fleming noted that Germany was on an 8-hour day, 48-hour week basis from July 26, 1934, to January 1, 1939, but shifted with unsatisfactory results to a 10-hour day, 50-hour week after January 1, 1939, due to a labor shortage.

Fleming quoted a German "Monthly Labor Review" study of the effects of this longer work week in the Third Reich which found:

"Production began to fall off rapidly, accompanied by such an alarming increase of industrial accidents and stoppages as to attract the serious attention of the government authorities."

Only three complaints from industry against the payment of time and one-half for overtime have been received, Fleming told the President, and all were from small establishments.

Few Complaints Received

The Treasury warning against price profiteering said that "the Bureau of Internal Revenue has had its attention called to the fact that in certain instances dealers in articles subject to the internal revenue taxes have raised the prices in excess of the defense taxes imposed by the revenue act of 1940."

Officials of the bureau explained later that very few complaints have been received, and that the statement was issued as a warning to those who might be contemplating unjustified price increases.

It was learned, however, that the bureau has been studying cases where a 10-cent glass of beer is still being sold at the same price but with less fluid content; also cases where cigarette venders charge more than justified by the half-cent increased tax on cigarettes. They are also watching such cases as a report from Denver that a radio which sold for $100 before the new taxes took effect July 1 now costs $115, whereas the new tax would be covered by a price increase of only 50 cents.

The National Defense Commission, charged partly with supervision of prices, also was understood yesterday to be warning citizens to be on the lookout for merchants who overcharge on the grounds of national defense.

the day's first aerial engagement was under way.

Other developments yesterday included:

Sir John Anderson, the home secretary, banned aliens from employment in any defense area, in munitions industries, in gas, water, electric and transport enterprises and in welfare organizations associated with the fighting forces.

A curfew, beginning next Monday night, was ordered for the northeastern civil defense area.

Patrol Yacht Sunk

The admiralty disclosed that the British patrol yacht Warrior II was sunk by enemy bombing in the Channel Thursday with the loss of one seaman.

An amplified statement of what had happened in Thursday night's British Continental raids was made in a bulletin which declared that Rotterdam's principal airport at Waalhaven was under a "series of attacks which lasted for nearly two hours."

"Hits were made on many parts of the airdrome and several fires were started."

Bombs were declared to have struck the runways and exploded among the airport buildings at Schipol Airdrome on the outskirts of Amsterdam, and more than 100 high explosive bombs were dropped on the airdrome at Haamstaade on the island Schouwen.

One British night raider flew 300 miles into Germany and bombed a big factory near Strasbourg, "causing fires and a continuous series of explosions."

Other objectives bombed were docks at Bremen; munitions works at Ludwigshaven and near Cologne; blast furnaces at Siegburg, near Cologne, and a factory at Mutterstadt.

Fur Union Heads Are Sentenced

New York, July 12 (AP).—Six officials and members of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union were sentenced today for tampering with Government witnesses.

Irving Potash, vice president, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, as were William Karpouzas and Useratos Vafiades, Joseph Winogradsky, assisant manager of the union's joint council, 15 months; Max Kochinsky, business agent, and Louis Hatios, member of the organizing committee, a year and a day each. They were convicted of conspiring to obstruct justice and influence Government witnesses in the Sherman antitrust trial of the now defunct Needletrades Workers Industrial Union last April.

U-Boat Believed Sunk in Attack

Dublin (Saturday), July 13 (AP).—The crew of the torpedoed Liverpool tanker Athellaird, 8,999 tons, said last night they believed they had sunk one of two U-boats which had attacked them.

One of the crew said that when the ship was struck, the captain ordered his gun crew to open fire and "we believe we scored a direct hit on one of the submarines." Part of the crew arrived in Ireland Thursday night, having rowed about 400 miles, to within sight of the coast before being picked up.

Camacho Party Claims Victory By 2,000,000

Almazan's Offices Raided by Federal Police, Papers Seized

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, July 12.—The Mexican Revolutionary Party, administration political organization, announced tonight that complete returns from Sunday's presidential election gave its candidate, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, a majority of 2,136,625 votes.

The party said Avila Camacho had received 2,265,199 votes, while the leading independent candidate, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, a conservative, had received only 128,574. Gen. Rafael Sanchez Tapia, leader of the center, was credited with 14,046 votes.

Counting of the ballots was completed yesterday by tabulating commissions, but official announcement of the outcome was not expected until September when the returns are presented to Congress for approval.

Almazan's followers, who conducted their own count, have made no figures public, but have claimed an overwhelming victory.

The announcement concerning the outcome of the elections came a few hours after federal secret police had raided Gen. Almazan's private offices and seized most of his business and personal papers.

Faction Faces Prosecution

Copyright by New York Times

Mexico City, July 12. — Ten thousand Mexican professional men and Catholic leaders, organized into a political unit known as the National Action Party, faced prosecution by the government tonight for their "outspoken support" of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan.

Demands for legal proceedings against the organization were filed today by the Governor of the Federal District, Raul Castellanos, who accused the organization of criminal libel. It was announced that "immediate action" would be taken.

The charge was based on an extract from an advertisement published yesterday in the conservative Mexico City newspaper Excelsior in which the faction accused the authorities of acquiescence and complicity in the disorders that accompanied the election.

The passage said "in many cases, those who were called to preserve order and give guarantees, tolerated and assisted gunmen who fired machine guns upon the people and then fled in their automobiles."

Manuel Gomez Morin, president of the National Action Party, said his organization had "conclusive proof" that this passage was "a statement of fact." He disclosed that since publication of the advertisement his home was searched by police, as were the downtown offices of National Action.

Creation of a ninth "streamlined" division was announced by the War Department, along with organization of numerous other new units made possible by a prospective increase of 55,000 men in the Regular Army's strength.

The Ninth Division's headquarters will be at Fort Bragg, N. C. Like its predecessors, it will have a peace strength of about 8,000.

Orders concentrating most of the existing Fifth Division at Camp Custer, Mich., were announced at the same time, as a part of widespread reshuffling of units in connection with the Army's expansion.

Fleet of 6,000 Tanks Planned

The House Deficiency Appropriations subcommittee agreed to remain in Washington during the Democratic convention to expedite action on the President's request for an additional $4,848,000,000 for "total defense."

War Department officials revealed that this supplemental request contemplates a fleet of approximately 6,000 tanks, nearly double the fleet previously authorized. Officials said a portion of the extra funds probably will be used for some supertanks, huge forts on wheels.

Authoritative sources reported that arrangements had been made for construction of a $30,000,000 smokeless powder plant at Louisville, Ky., with defense funds. It would be operated by the duPont Powder Co.

Frank Knox, new Secretary of the Navy, said at his first press conference that he plans to tour the entire naval establishment by plane in order to familiarize himself with his new job.

He pledged himself to administer the broad aspects of the department's affairs, but to leave to Navy technicians—whom he termed "the best in the world"—all technical matters. He praised the coordination of the defense drive, and said he was "both delighted and surprised" to find such complete harmony existing between the Army and the Navy.

3 Naval Contracts In Virginia Let

The Navy Department yesterday made public these contracts.

Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va., for hangar, etc., the Jeffress-Dyer Co., Washington, D. C., estimated cost $225,000.

Naval Hospital, Norfolk, Va., hospital wards, Weddle & Co., Norfolk, Va., estimated cost $165,000.

Norfolk, Va., aviation shore facilities, Virginia Engineering Co., Inc., Newport News, Va., estimated cost $12,700,000.

Army Garrison At Old Ft. Eustis Again Planned

By the Associated Press

The War Department announced plans yesterday for early garrisoning of the old World War mobilization center at Fort Eustis, Va.

The site has been used in recent years by various agencies under a War Department loan, though title has remained in the Army.

Department officials said it was planned to develop the site as an adjunct to nearby Langley Field, wing headquarters for the GHQ airforce, and to locate there the Third battalion, Twenty-first Engineers (aviation), of 288 enlisted strength, to be transferred from Fort Benning, Ga., to function with the GHQ air force.

Also to be stationed there will be the newly organized First Chemical Decontamination Co., of 65 enlisted strength, to be composed of colored troops.

Army officials said the garrisoning of Fort Eustis would of necessity involve considerable construction work there, but that no details were yet available on what would be undertaken.

Ambassadors Bullitt, Biddle and Wedell Plan Madrid Parley

By T. J. Hamilton.
Copyright by New York Times

Madrid, July 12.—William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, accompanied by a party of eight, arrived in Barcelona this afternoon from France. He will drive to Madrid tomorrow and is expected to leave the following day for Lisbon, en route home.

It is understood that Anthony Drexel Biddle, jr., Ambassador to the exiled Polish government now in London, is coming here tomorrow from San Sebastian to participate in an exchange of impressions between Mr. Bullitt and Alexander W. Wedell, United States Ambassador to Spain.

Meanwhile, Spanish newspapers following the example set by the Italian press now have decided that, despite its trend toward totalitarianism, France must be held responsible for bringing on the war. Heretofore papers here expressed great sympathy for that country now that it was repenting the errors of the Popular Front, but the newspaper Arriba says today that France is not yet fully convinced of its mistakes and that it was jointly responsible with Britain.

In another editorial Arriba underlines the demotion of the Duke of Windsor to a minor post as Governor of the Bahamas, and declares that the Duke failed to measure up to his responsibilities. Despite an official denial that he had resigned as liaison officer with the French armies, it is known that he had calmly spent a month before leaving France in a chateau on the Riviera.

In the light of subsequent events there is less reason than ever to put any credence in the rumor that the Duke of Windsor, while here, was sounding out the German Embassy on possible peace terms. However, in view of the continued delay in the German offensive against Britain, it may be worth setting down here that rumors persist of contacts between the British and the Germans.

They have even gone so far as to state that Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador, met Dr. Eberhard von Stohrer, the German Ambassador, the other night at the Ritz Hotel—despite the fact that as their gardens adjoin, a less public rendezvous would have been easy to find. There also is heard talk of Jose Felix de le Querica, Spanish Ambassador to France, going to England to repeat his mediation efforts.

Dr. Richmond Funeral Rites Set Monday

Clergyman Formerly Was President Of Union College

Funeral services for Dr. Charles Alexander Richmond, 78, clergyman and former president of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., will be held at 3 p. m. Monday at his home, 1904 R street northwest. He will be buried in the chapel of Union College.

Dr. Richmond

Dr. Richmond died Thursday.

Born in New York, he was graduated from Princeton University, receiving his A. B. degree in 1883 and an A. M. in 1886. The Princeton Theological Seminary awarded him the degree of doctor of divinity in 1888.

From 1888 until he became president of Union in 1909 Dr. Richmond served as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of East Aurora, N. Y., and the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, Albany. As president of Union College from 1909 to 1922 he introduced a program which raised new buildings, broadened the curriculum, and increased the endowment.

During the World War he held the temporary rank of major as director of the Second Region, Students' Army Training Corps, controlling all work in universities and colleges in New Jersey and New York. After his retirement from Union, he and Mrs. Richmond made their home in Washington.

Dr. Richmond was a prolific writer and lectured widely. He maintained a summer home at Pointe au Pic, Canada. Honorary degrees were conferred upon him by Rutgers, New York University, the University of Pittsburgh, George Washington, Princeton, Union and St. Andrews in Scotland.

He was a member of the Century and Ends of the Earth clubs in New York, the Royal and Ancient Golf Club in Scotland, and the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase clubs here. He was president of the Association of American Colleges in 1922, and was governor and vice president of the Washington branch of the English Speaking Union.

Surviving, besides his wife, are two daughters, Mrs. Charles W. MacMullen, of New York, and Mrs. Claude Hawes, wife of Col. Hawes, of the British army, living in England.

Open-Air Program Set

Leesburg, Va., July 12.—The Rev. Charles T. Warner, D. D., of Mount St. Albans, Washington, will deliver the sermon at the second open-air union service which will be held on the courthouse green Sunday evening. Special music will be an anthem by the boys' choir of St. James and a solo by Miss Elizabeth Chamberlin, of Hamilton.

Drastic Housecleaning

The drastic housecleaning undertaken by District Attorney Curran is the more surprising if one considers the efficiency of the organization built up by his predecessor, David A. Pine.

All four of the assistants asked to resign have long been attached to the district attorney's office. One of them, David A. Hart, has been on the staff for 20 years. These men were retained by Mr. Pine, when he took office in 1938, in accordance with the fundamental principle of the merit system.

In February of this year, shortly before Mr. Pine was elevated to the bench of District Court, his office had reduced the number of cases awaiting trial to 98. Two years previously the number was 436. It is impossible, of course, to judge how much of the gain was due to the district attorney's personal ability and how much to that of his assistants. It is safe to say, however, that without a capable staff he could not have achieved so excellent a result.

If and when Messrs. Hart, Goldstein, Haycock and Kindleberger are removed from office, there will remain other proven assistants left over from Mr. Pine's staff, some of them highly able. It is to be hoped that they, too, are not to be victims of what looks uncommonly like a purge. The people of Washington were well pleased with the accomplishments of Mr. Pine's staff and they are watching with close attention Mr. Curran's apparent intention to dissolve a smooth-running organization.

Defense Delays

When the United States entered the World War, grandiose plans for the production of at least 29,000 airplanes were immediately launched. When the war ended 19 months later, the promised clouds of airplanes that were to fly over the German lines were still but an infinitesimal speck on the horizon. There were about 200 American-built observation planes at the front and these were of a type described by a Congressional committee as "exceptionally dangerous to pilots and observers because of their defective construction." About 600 other American planes were in use behind the lines.

Meanwhile Congress had appropriated nearly one and a quarter billion dollars for Army aviation purposes, and the Government had spent over one billion dollars of that total. This sorry history of magnificent promise and negligible performance was due to various causes, some avoidable, others inevitable. Graft, favoritism and inexperience resulted in a criminal waste of time and money. But there was also the handicap of a small, undeveloped industry to overcome. By the time an expanded industry was ready to show results, the Armistice came and the war-created plants were mostly liquidated.

Although present-day conditions are radically different in many respects from those prevailing in 1917-18, useful lessons can be learned from the experiences of those years. The first lesson is that appropriating money and spending it will not assure prompt arming for defense unless the Nation's industries are already prepared to produce the needed equipment. Indeed, it is a physical impossibility for a country whose industry is geared to peacetime requirements to shift suddenly to production of equipment for tremendously expanded land, sea and air defenses. A year or maybe two will be needed to build and put in full operation new plants to supplement inadequate existing facilities. And some of the material turned out requires a long time to produce. The public should be apprised of these facts so that it will not be disappointed if miracles are not accomplished within the next few months.

However, while a good deal of time must inevitably elapse before the tangible results of defense preparation will seem impressive, there are certain kinds of delays that can be avoided, such as those already encountered in trying to place orders for the construction of airplane engines. The hesitation of the Packard company in accepting the order previously rejected by Ford is said to have been largely due to uncertainty regarding the allowances to be made for depreciation and the nature of the contemplated excess profits taxes.

Fortunately assurances have been given that liberal allowances will be made in the forthcoming tax bill for amortization of new capital outlays for defense purposes. Severe legislative restrictions upon profits on contracts for airplanes and naval vessels will also be eliminated, and the contracting industries will be subjected to the general schedule of excess profits taxes.

This arrangement should do much to clear the way for effective cooperation on the part of private industry in financing a program of plant expansion and in speeding placement of contracts. There are, of course, countless problems to be considered in the allocation of orders and the translation of the long-range defense program into terms of plants and material equipment. With billions of dollars available for spending, the progress of the defense program will depend upon the intelligence with which it is planned and the ability of those charged with supervising its execution.

The Cumulative Effect

The German effort to force Great Britain to her knees is being pushed along three separate, although somewhat overlapping, lines. If the threat of actual military invasion is counted, there are four distinct methods of attack.

The first and most spectacular of these is aerial warfare. German air raids, directed primarily against military objectives but undoubtedly designed to shake civilian morale as well, are daily increasing in intensity. The bombings now seem to be directed against every section of Great Britain, and the material damage involved, to say nothing of the loss of life, is undoubtedly serious.

Destruction of shipping is the second method of attack. In this also airplanes, as well as submarines, torpedo craft and raiders, play an important part. According to the German announcement, about one-quarter of all the merchant ships sunk during the war have fallen victims to assault from the air. This proportion may well be correct, even though the total of the German claims is subject to sharp discount. In any case the airplane as a commerce raider has in this war given ample demonstration of its terrible potency.

The third method of attack is invisible, but not less injurious on that account. It is the blockade which Hitler, following Napoleon's example in this respect, has imposed on Britain by the roundabout device of capturing all her European markets. Portugal is now the only country on that continent with which the British can still trade with any degree of certainty. This fact of itself explains why reports of a projected German invasion of Portugal must be taken seriously. If that country falls under Nazi control another market for British exports, and another source of supply for Great Britain, will have disappeared.

The cumulative effect of the bombings, the sinkings and the loss of markets must be terrible. And all three methods are being pushed simultaneously in such a way as to exert the greatest possible pressure on the beleaguered British people. They are, moreover, forms of attack which are exceptionally difficult to counter successfully. German planes are being destroyed, German submarines sunk and German bases raided by the heroic and very efficient Royal Air Force. But these retaliations are in no way weakening the Nazi grip.

It may be surmised, therefore, that the British people would actually welcome the much-discussed invasion of the island which Hitler is said to plan. They could then get at the enemy. The regiments now resting on their arms would go into action. The grim satisfaction of hitting back and hitting hard would be afforded.

Precisely for that reason, however, it may be doubted that Germany will move immediately, either to invade Ireland or to move troops across the English Channel. Hand-to-hand combat, considering the present temper of the British, would be dangerous for the heretofore victorious German legions. There is far less risk of reversal in the cold-blooded method of strangulation now being employed.

As long as the indirect pressures gain in effectiveness it seems probable that direct invasion of England will not be attempted. But unquestionably the plans for that development are laid; unquestionably it will be attempted, and attempted with characteristic speed and force, if the German high command reaches the conclusion that present tactics are not wearing Britain down with the rapidity which is essential to the Nazi scheme of war.

What Of It?

The epidemic of jitters which swept America after the invasion of the Low Countries has not yet subsided. Witness the curious dither occasioned by a revelation that certain members of Congress had attended, at the invitation of Representative Collins, a private showing of some films purporting to show just how Herr Hitler's army goes about one of its celebrated blitzkriegs.

These movies, it seems, are released in America by one of our news reel organizations, but were made, edited and distributed by the Germans for propaganda purposes. What of it? News films can, of course, be "doctored" by various devices, but probably not even the genius of Dr. Goebbels can make the representation of a blitzkrieg seem much more terrible than the actuality. No doubt to anyone who continues to set any value on human life or human happiness the film is pretty painful, but so are the uncensored war films made by good American photographers.

Only on the premise that what we refuse to know will never hurt us could there have been any logical objection to Mr. Collins' film party. There is something to be said for that point of view. But if we are to adopt it we should logically stop publishing any news about the war.

Thus Mr. Collins' postscript urging his colleagues to complete secrecy was likewise illogical and, if we may say so, rather silly. It was probably more responsible than anything else for the uproar.

Problem Of Growth

During the past decade 130,000 persons have been added to the population of the District of Columbia. This rapid increase is largely attributable to a concurrent expansion of Government activities which has raised the number of Federal employes to an all-time high. For the entire metropolitan area of Washington the increase in population since 1930 has been 325,000, or between five and six times the increase in the number of Federal employes.

Since many of the people who come to Washington to enter Government service have families, and since the presence of these new Federal employes attracts others to the city, it is highly probable that the addition of 30,000 new defense workers would raise the population of Washington and surrounding areas by another 150,000. On the basis of such assumptions, Rufus S. Lusk concludes that it is "almost a dead certainty that by the end of another 12 months apartments will be practically filled and the market for new homes will continue to be as good, if not better, than at present."

Current estimates indicate that at present there are sufficient housing vacancies in Washington to care for 25,000 additional persons, with accommodations for 40,000 more in process of construction. Thus, it would appear that no immediate housing shortage impends, although any sudden influx of people into a city is always certain to create shortages of types of housing suited to the needs of certain groups. But if the ranks of Government workers were to be raised as predicted, the resultant congestion would be serious—serious not only as respects housing, but in its effect upon other municipal services.

Washington is now suffering from inability to cope with the problems of over-rapid municipal growth. If these problems should be exaggerated by an unexpected influx of defense workers, it would be a matter for regret instead of congratulation.

The need for decentralization of the Government executive establishments has often been urged for reasons connected with the national defense, as a matter of convenience and as a means of improving the administrative efficiency of agencies that need closer contact with the people in various parts of the country.

The prospect of adding to the existing local congestion in Government offices, and of creating a congestion in residential areas of the Capital City, is another strong argument in favor of balancing the prospective influx of new workers by a process of dispersion.

Successor To Paris?

One result of catastrophes abroad, we are told, will be to shift leadership in fashion design to the United States.

Fashion experts meeting in New York this week agreed that the United States now lacks none of the essential elements to make this country a successor to France in this form of artistic inspiration. One expert, Mme. Helene Lyolene, asserted she had met designers working in America for $25 a week whose talents are "so wonderful they made me jealous." Another said hopefully that when the Duchess of Windsor reaches the Bahamas she will very possibly provide "the stimulus the southern season needs."

Altogether optimism flourished to the extent that one can almost visualize future Parisiennes coming to Scranton to learn what the well-dressed woman wears.

Healthy possibilities undoubtedly exist in a break with the traditions—or superstitions—which have long governed style makers. Fashion designing has been regarded as an art in and for itself. The victims of the cult, who wear the clothes, have been considered primarily in the light of those who are supposed to take it.

If the rise of the United States as a center of fashion means that clothes will be designed primarily for the comfort, pleasure and decoration of those who wear them, the shift will not merely benefit the Nation but should also foster domestic tranquillity and make the sidewalk panorama even more pleasing to the eye.

Honestly, we're almost as jittery as we were when we thought Halley's comet was going to switch its tail and slap the world to Kingdom Come.

After reading the war news of the day, we feel terribly sad. We should say we're about as happy as a king.

Railroad Rates

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent political broadcast, Representative Hobbs, of Alabama, in enumerating the accomplishments of the Democratic Party, and especially of the present Administration, included the establishment of equitable railroad rates.

Someone should have reminded the Representative, before he made this assertion, that interstate railroad rates are under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, a body which is supposed to act with entire freedom from party politics. Previous to the establishment of the commission, in 1887, transportation rates were notoriously subject to abuses arising from political, sectional and individual manipulation. To aid the divorce of the subject from politics, the law provided that only a certain number of the commissioners might be from the same political party. The fixation of rates was deemed to be scientific rather than political. Since 1887 the courts, in numerous decisions, have endeavored to define principles that may properly be applied in fixing reasonable rates, but it is hardly necessary to add that in none of them are political considerations mentioned. The law also has been amended from time to time in an attempt to define these principles, with like omission of reference to politics.

After careful exploration of all possibilities, I am forced to the conclusion that the Representative had in mind a recent decision of the commission which upheld, in principle, a contention of the South (as well as of the far West) that rates between those sections and the East should be so modified as to give shippers in the former sections better access to the business of the latter. Nothwithstanding the predominance of Democratic and Southern members in the commission, as now constituted, I feel sure that those who joined in the majority opinion in the case mentioned would be quick to deny and to resent implication that their action was political. However, the Representative may not be entirely responsible for his error. It is impossible to deny that there is now a prevalent belief that in naming members of judicial and quasi-judicial bodies, it is not only permissible but quite in order to consider the views of the appointees upon particular questions with which they may be required to deal.

"Gover'ment"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it too much to hope that eventually a good majority of our statesmen, great orators and radio announcers will learn that there is an "n" in the word "government?" For reference please see any dictionary. The illiterate pronunciation "gover'ment" is and properly should be quite disturbing. One of the most frequently used, it is certainly one of the most abused words in our language.

It is equally distressing to hear some of those striving for rhetorical effect mouth the words "these United States." The name of this Nation is "The United States of America" (or for brevity "The United States"). The word "the" instead of "these" is not only more accurate but has a more patriotic and nationalistic implication.

Will those among our many excellent orators in Washington and elsewhere, who are meticulous in many details, but sinners in the above needless indulgences, kindly take note and oblige? G. S. P.

Veterans And Jobs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There would seem to have been some misunderstanding on the part of veterans and others relative to the recent request of the National Association of Regulars that all civil service requirements be waived for the appointment of veterans to positions under the new $4,000,000,000 national defense projects.

The National Association of Regulars has not taken this stand primarily to assist veterans to obtain these jobs. There can be no greater proof of a man's loyalty to his country than the fact that he at one time enlisted in the United States Army, Navy, Marine Corps or Coast Guard and thus offered to lay down his life, if necessary, in defense of that country.

City Noises

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just a word of praise for the one patrolman of this city who knew enough about being a peace officer to stop the morning whistler. The judge's contention that it was nice to be cheerful may be well taken, too. To illustrate—there is a couple who live several doors down the street east of me, and the man gets up under my window nearly every morning and hollers back sweet adieus to his mate.

Of course, the judge, whose sentence was really a rebuke to the patrolman, would say that it was a great and glorious thing for a man to say a sweet adieu to his wife when he left at 6 o'clock in the morning, but what's the matter with his saying it on his own doorstep, where he does not have to disturb the morning rest of an elderly woman?

I recommend to the new Government training agency that they take in and train every parent who has a child between the ages of 5 and 17. The historian Gibbon said that there would be no more civilizations destroyed because there would be no more barbarians to invade, but poor benighted Gibbon never knew of the slums of Brooklyn that bred Al Capone, nor did he imagine that people who were law abiding might have so little interest in the youth of America that they did not impress upon their children that the tots could be just as happy behaving themselves as children raising sand in front of the people of more quiet pursuits. Thanks to the early morning patrolman who at least knew his job.

The Third Term

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to be still open season on the great question of the day. William Allen White predicts that the President will not accept a third term nomination. I think White is wrong. Nor do I think Mr. Farley the first member of the Cabinet to have the answer.

Early in 1939 a Chicago delegation came to Washington to urge Secretary Ickes to run for mayor of Chicago. A few days later Mr. Ickes went to Chicago for further conference. Then he returned to Washington and talked with F. D. R., reportedly on this subject. A few days after that he announced that he was not interested in the Chicago nomination.

My conclusion then was that Mr. Ickes probably would have been interested in the Chicago mayoralty had he faced ending of his tenure in the Cabinet with the end of the present national Administration, but was not interested in the Chicago job as against a strong chance for four years more up front on the national stage.

EDWARD FERRIS.
Washington, July 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The insistent citing of expressions of Thomas Jefferson adverse to the third-term makes interesting the expression of Jefferson, the practical man, in January, 1805, just prior to the beginning of his second term. Jefferson was opposed to a third term under ordinary circumstances, and, writing John Taylor, declared that to be "my principle," and that he intended to retire after his second term. He went on to say:

"I had determined to declare my intention, but I have consented to be silent on the opinion of friends, who think it best not to put a continuance out of my power in defiance of all circumstances."

Undoubtedly, if "circumstances" had warranted he would have accepted a third term, and, if living now, he would declare that the present "circumstances" justify a demand that President Roosevelt accept a third term.

Condemning The Conquered

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the destruction of Poland and the defeat of France, and even more so with the imminent fall of Britain, there has arisen a tendency among well-meaning American citizens to successively condemn each of Germany's major victims with the words: "Oh, well, it serves them right. They had it coming to them." People who voice such sentiments display an amazing lack of tolerance and understanding of contemporary world affairs. For instance, to justify the German aggression in Poland on the grounds that the Poles followed mistaken policies in the post-war period is neither fair nor just. Yet I have heard many a man pass off the German outrage with the solemn statement: "The Poles got what they deserved. They never were a democracy anyway." In this same vein, people have criticized France for her stupid post-war policy. Is it then to be assumed that because France did some wrong things she should be mangled with impunity by the Nazis with the world standing by to witness and applaud? France's attitude in the Ruhr occupation was perhaps erratic, and her domestic conditions were undoubtedly the cause of her downfall, but because of this should we cheer the German victory?

Likewise there is the matter of Britain. Sage citizens recall her historic meddling in the Balkans, conduct in the Boer wars, and inaction when collective security began to disintegrate, and all agree that she, too, deserves to be punished and the empire destroyed by Germany.

The danger of such loose-mouthed comment is obvious. The United States has been guilty of unjust deeds in the past and has followed some pretty poor post-war policies, too. For instance, the transportation of the Georgia Indians from their homeland to Oklahoma dwarfs to Sunday school picnic character the Nazi transportation of the Poles from their homes. And the sending of United States troops into disputed territory to be fired on previous to the Mexican War smacks of a Japanese trick in north China. Also, after the last war our high tariffs as much as anything else helped to keep Germany in a bad economic position.

If those who subscribe to the above-mentioned sentiments concerning the Allies carry their beliefs to their obvious conclusion, they will see that the United States, too, deserves to be trampled beneath the Nazi heel because of our past mistakes.

The Post Impressionist

Army Widows

Man was not made to live alone. Neither was woman. And above all, one man was not intended to be surrounded by and responsible for 50 women. It's a problem that requires the proverbial patience of Job—from the viewpoint of both the man and the women. It's a problem that is receiving constant attention in these days of wars and rumors of wars.

The regiment marches away to the maneuvers. Capt. Jenks is left behind to guard the post and the ladies of the regiment. Capt. Jenks is young and attractive. He feels important for the first hour. He feels sorry for his fellow officers. They will be laboring in the field, fighting the battles of Blues and Reds as well as chiggers, ants and grasshoppers, while he enjoys a life of ease and comfort. Think, he muses, how late he will be able to sleep in the mornings! Think of the golf and tennis he is about to enjoy!

He starts toward his office. He is stopped by a frantic Mrs. A. Her husband has marched away with the car keys in his pocket. That's nothing. Such a little matter will be remedied easily by a capable captain. It's a surprise, though, the amount of red tape that must be unwound to locate the husband at his secret and confidential destination. Then when Capt. Jenks feels like a spy caught in the act of sabotage, husband A announces that he does not have the keys. They must have been sent by mistake to the laundry.

The telephone rings, while Capt. Jenks is at dinner. Ruined is his steak. It's Mrs. B. Her son doesn't understand his homework. Capt. Jenks is supposed to solve all the masculine problems of garrison life. Surely algebra belongs in that category. Capt. Jenks is not so certain. Neither is son, after he attends school the next day.

The fort is dark and deserted. It's a strange, manless world. No soldiers march across the parade ground. No bugles sound. There are no husbands to take dogs for their nightly walks or to tell bedtime stories to the children. There is only Capt. Jenks. He can manage the dogs. He has trouble with the children. Stairs creak, shutters rattle, long halls are filled with macabre shadows. There are no husbands to investigate the terrors of midnight. There is only the telephone and Capt. Jenks.

Morning brings new puzzles and morning begins at an early hour, since someone must let out the Cs' cat and bring in the Ds' paper. Then just before reveille, there is an intruder in the Es' house. It must be a dangerous burglar—but it's just the 2-year-old deciding that now is the time to investigate the fascinating contents of the desk drawers.

The fort seems even lonelier by day. There is nothing for the ladies to do. They gather in little groups and discuss the news that drifts by underground routes, from the distant world of men and maneuvers. Capt. Jenks must separate truth from fiction. The weather forecast is for rain. Capt. Jenks is given packages of overshoes to send to husbands in the field. Mrs. A is making a shirt as a birthday surprise for her husband. "Please, Capt. Jenks, will you try it on? I want to see how it looks on a man." Capt. Jenks is small. Husband is big. Mrs. A is not satisfied with the result. "Capt. Jenks, have you any ideas about the seams?"

Mrs. B waits outside his office door. "The bank writes that my account is overdrawn. I know the bank is wrong. Will you take a look at these stubs so I can prove it?" That sounds easy, but Mrs. B appears to have a mind above cents and she has her own ideas on the subject of bookkeeping. She ignores the cents and only writes down the dollars. Something or someone is wrong. After a long morning, Capt. Jenks merely knows that it cannot be the bank.

The Blues are attacking the Reds and capturing their general in a dramatic charge. Capt. Jenks is hanging freshly laundered curtains. The Reds surround the Blues and the artillery moves into position. Capt. Jenks is meeting arriving visitors at the station and showing them the garrison's points of interests. The artillery opens fire and Mrs. C decides to discharge her cook. It's a man's duty to protect women from the unpleasant things of life. Capt. Jenks is forced to tell the cook that Mrs. C wants no more burnt toast. Conferences are held on the new blitzkrieg tactics. Capt. Jenks fixes radios and electric iron cords. Important mock battles are being fought. Capt. Jenks makes a fourth at bridge and digs holes for rose bushes. He paints flower boxes and punishes Junior. The simulated war is over, but Capt. Jenks still searches in closets and beneath beds. He still wonders how a man can take a husband's place and tell Mrs. F that shorts, according to regulations, are not suitable for the post exchange.

The regiment returns. Capt. Jenks sighs with relief. Husbands can now lock doors and bribe children to take their cod-liver oil, so they'll grow big and strong like daddy! He smiles as he hears the distant rumble of caissons. Smiles, then frowns. The regiment has been joined by another regiment. By noon there are rumors, by night the rumors are facts. The two regiments are leaving for bigger and better war games. And Capt. Jenks will again be left behind—this time as the guardian of nearly 100 women. He sighs, then he brightens. At least he is putting into practice his training in command, tactics and strategy, not forgetting the other military virtues of resourcefulness and initiative.

Fair Enough

Defensive War

SENATOR BURT WHEELER holds that Americans should fight only in defense of their homeland, which is what they all say, including the Germans, and that a "foreign war," meaning a war on foreign soil, including the enemy's, is unthinkable.

He is of that group who insist that no Americans shall fight abroad because necessarily they would help Great Britain.

The idea of another A. E. F. to France or Britain never was seriously proposed. For one thing, the British and French were very cocky during that phase which was called the Bore War and couldn't find fighting room for the soldiers they had. The British had plenty of manpower at home in mufti, and these men, n v r lived under the guns for some time, presumably were closer to military fitness than American civilians. For another reason, there were no American soldiers to send, and, for still another, it was foreseen that France might crack up and that an expeditionary force, caught friendless in a strange and hostile land, might be held for ransom, so to speak.

Nor is there today any proposal before the country that an American army be sent to help the British or even to beat the Germans to a problematical punch in that direction. There is still no army to send, the spirit doesn't exist, and, again, such a force would be rounded up, whereupon the U. S. A. would have to give up everything to bail them out.

BUT, AS ONE of those who respect Senator Wheeler, I don't follow him, because he doesn't go anywhere. He just says "no fighting on foreign fields," leaving his fellow citizens to conclude that if war must be the United States should give the party on her own home grounds.

But France gave the party in 1914-1918 and again in 1940, and the wear and tear on the country were something awful. A c r these years, now and again, right up to the fall of 1939, some French peasant would stub the snout of his plow against a souvenir and be splattered over some old battleground. France was still tweezing crumbled brick, splintered glass and rusty iron out of her side long after the Germans had settled down, amid modern comforts built with money obtained by fraud from the American people to create the equipment for their next war away from home.

Those Germans are smart. They realize that all wars are foreign wars, and this time, again, has given the party in collaboration with Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium and Britain. And again, with the exception of a few divots scuffed up in Germany by the British fliers, the nations which are merely defending their own soil have suffered all the damage.

The unfortunate Poles, Dutch and Belgians certainly did not attack Germany, whatever may be said of the political moves of France and Britain. They just put themselves in a position of defense, and Hitler jumped them, crying, "They pulled a knife on me!" The Norwegians didn't even do that, but Hitler said they were thinking of pulling a knife. In all cases the damage to the premises has been terrible.

NOT ONLY THAT, but in these wars civilians get in the way, and in an American war of home defense the civilians would be Mrs. Smith from down the street and her old invalid mother and George Spelvin's wife and children. They would be blown up by enemy bombers in a most intimate, personal way while trying to escape. Mr. Smith and Mr. Spelvin, of course, would be miles away defending their soil.

In no heckling spirit but in an earnest desire for elaboration some questions may be asked Senator Wheeler:

How close may the enemy come before his intentions are considered to be hostile? Does the enemy take over the British and French naval and aviation outposts just off American shores before the defense takes place? Does the United States have to suffer all the civilian casualties and awful material wreckage and the enemy none? How can the United States smash up his war industries without fighting on foreign soil?

And do we give him our solemn promise that he needn't bother to protect his plants and may concentrate on the destruction of ours?

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

"Total Defense"—Minus

THE PRESIDENT told Congress this week that his latest request for authorizations and appropriations marks a change from a program of partial to a program of "total defense." What, then, is the difference between partial and total defense? Broadly speaking, partial defense means placing orders for all the armaments that the existing factories and shipyards can produce; total defense means investing capital to enlarge the existing plants and to establish new additional plants.

There is, of course, no doubt whatever that the existing facilities cannot carry out the arms program which Congress favors. A two-ocean navy, a great air force and the equipment of a very much more considerable modern mechanized army cannot be constructed without an immense expansion of the armament industry itself and of the underlying industries which feed it with machines and materials. No doubt Congress will, therefore, grant the President's request.

BUT BETWEEN adopting the principle of total defense and putting it into practice there is a wide chasm to be crossed, and there is not as yet convincing evidence that the Administration is preparing to cross it. The plain fact of the matter is that Washington is not yet organized to plan, to direct, or to administer a great armament program, nor has it yet nerved itself to asking for the authority over capital and labor which such a program inexorably requires. We are in the embryonic stage of grandiose authorizations, large appropriations, sincere enthusiasm, the gathering together in Washington of an extraordinarily competent collection of executives and experts, the solution of specific difficulties, the placing of large orders. But the effort is not organized. There is no real center of responsible direction and authority. And little has been done with lucidity and courage to liberate the national effort from the endless restrictions and complications imposed by vested interests, pressure groups, political indifference, and bureaucratic inertia.

To say this is no reflection whatever on the able and devoted men who are working on the program. The best men in the world cannot hope to be successful if they lack the necessary authority and are not properly organized.

THE VICE of the present situation in Washington is most clearly revealed by the fact that at the very time when the President is proposing to expand the facilities for making armaments he is still opposing measures to make the fullest possible use of existing facilities. No one will question the wisdom of expanding the facilities. It is absolutely necessary. But on the average the facilities cannot be expanded and be made ready to produce in quantity in much less than 18 months. No one knows better than the President how necessary it is to increase the production of military equipment quickly. It is necessary as a measure of sheer defense, as an action to maintain our influence in this hemisphere, as a means of speeding up the things ordered by the British, and as a way of gaining time in which to organize for "total defense." But the President has not been willing, it would appear, to call in the leaders of organized labor and invite them as a national duty to cooperate in placing the existing industries on an emergency basis in order to obtain maximum production at once. He is still in the stage of wanting to build new plants without using at full capacity the plants which are already in operation.

And what are the reasons for this obstruction? It is alleged that there are still unemployed who should be put to work before the armament workers are allowed to work longer hours; the reason is false because the need is for the work of skilled men specifically trained for specific work, and it will take months to train the untrained. If time is of the essence, and it is of the essence, then it is sheer folly not to work longer hours in the critical armament industries. It is alleged also that the social gains of labor must be defended; the answer is that the social gains of labor in the recent past and its social ambitions in the future can be defended only by defending the independence and the freedom of America. If these are lost, all the gains of labor will be lost, and a labor leader who does not realize that is walking in his sleep. Finally, it is not alleged, though it is the controlling consideration, that this is an election year. But unless Mr. Willkie is a very different man from the man he is, he will support and not attack a labor policy suited to the emergency.

So, if the existing facilities are not now worked to maximum capacity, it will be because the President has not yet converted his own mind to the requirements of total defense.

THIS PARTICULAR example merely illustrates the trouble which will prevent the Administration from achieving what it is asking Congress to authorize. The President is afraid to call upon labor to expedite the program. Likewise, he has not yet seriously faced the problem of dealing with industrial management. Thus, we are still in the stage of offering to corporations contracts which they are free to refuse. That is not total defense. There will be no total defense until the government, having worked out fairly and wisely the conditions under which private industry ought to operate, then asks for the necessary authority to commandeer and compel.

We shall be trifling with great matters as long as we continue to act as if we thought that men may be conscripted but that industrialists may be volunteers or conscientious objectors, free to refuse or accept what the Government asks them to do. No doubt it is difficult for this Administration to ask for authority to compel businessmen for the national defense when it has spent so many years failing to induce their cooperation in matters where compulsion might so often have been avoided. But the fact remains that in a situation where compulsion is a necessary guarantee of prompt action, the Administration is not seeking the indispensable authority of any government which is arming seriously.

SO, THOUGH the government has authorizations and money, it does not have the necessary authority. However, if it had the authority it could not exercise the necessary authority through its present organization. For all responsibility and power are centered in the President and are derived from him. And what is the President? He is an inordinately busy man who has to administer the government, conduct foreign policy, lead a political party, and do a hundred other distracting things. It is inconceivable that he can fully understand the whole problem of national defense when he can devote to it only a little of his time and a small part of his attention. It is certain that a great national effort which is directed by a man who cannot devote his attention to it will lack energy, direction, and enthusiasm.

This is no reflection on Mr. Roosevelt personally. It is nothing but the recognition of the fact that he is one man, not several supermen, and that because he cannot attend fully to the business of national defense, he will confuse it by ill-considered decisions, and he will stall it by postponing decisions and he will devitalize it by discouraging his subordinates from making responsible decisions. A way must, therefore, be found to give men like Messrs. Stimson, Knox, Knudsen and Stettinius responsibility and authority which do not depend upon the fluctuating moods of an overworked President. A way can, no doubt, be found if the people want it to be found.

PRESIDENT MONROE

Consistent Monroe

By Felix Morley
Editor of The Post

The Doctrine Works Both Ways

THE IMPORTANCE of the Monroe Doctrine as a cardinal principle of American foreign policy can scarcely be exaggerated at this time. On the basis of this doctrine is being erected the whole tremendous program for hemisphere defense. All current plans for improving our relations with Latin America, and for keeping the war out of the New World, have their roots in the famous message which President Monroe delivered to Congress on December 2, 1823. Without this Doctrine, still fresh and vigorous in spite of its years, there would be little justification for the important Pan-American conference scheduled to convene in Havana next week.

It seems eminently fitting, therefore, that the American people should refresh their memories as to the actual content and purpose of this great manifesto. If that is done, there will be much less risk of unnecessary international complications, less room for justified recriminations, and far better chance of preserving peace and democracy throughout the Western Hemisphere during the difficult days ahead.

The original Monroe Doctrine has two essential parts, which in the minds of its sponsors were absolutely inseparable. The first and most publicized part of the doctrine is that which declares that the United States would regard any attempt by European powers "to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety." This ringing assertion of policy was qualified only by the statement that "with the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power (in the New World) we have not interfered and shall not interfere."

The second part of the Monroe Doctrine is equally important but much less frequently quoted. Herein it is stated that: "In the wars of the European Powers in matters relating to themselves we have never taken any part, nor does it comport with our policy so to do." And President Monroe, obviously desiring to emphasize this point, said further: "Our policy in regard to Europe . . . remains the same, which is not to interfere in the internal concerns of any of its Powers; to consider the government de facto as the legitimate government for us. . . ."

II.

THE COMPLEMENTARY and inseparable character of these two parts is obvious. Indeed the only possible justification for telling other people to mind their business is an agreement, given or implied, to mind your own. And it is well to remember that this country offered no warnings to European dictatorships until American statesmanship had fully demonstrated that it had no intention of ordering the affairs of the Old World.

"Behind the Monroe Doctrine," said J. Reuben Clark in the comprehensive memorandum on the subject which he wrote in 1928, while Undersecretary of State, "is the principle of the complete political separation of Europe and the Americas." And Mr. Clark, reporting to Secretary of State Kellogg, further observed that: "The principles of the non-extension of the European political system to this hemisphere and interposition in the affairs of Latin-American republics are mere corollaries of the political separation of Europe and America."

Our diplomatic record strongly supports the contention that an essential part of the Monroe Doctrine is its categorical statement that: "In the wars of the European Powers in matters relating to themselves we have never taken any part, nor does it comport with our policy so to do."

Interesting evidence to this effect is found in a letter written by Thomas Jefferson to President Monroe when the latter asked the advice of the Sage of Monticello on the Doctrine which was then being formulated. Writing under date of October 24, 1823, Mr. Jefferson said:

"The question presented by the letters you have sent me is the most momentous which has ever been offered to my contemplation since that of independence. That made us a nation. This sets our compass and points the course which we are to steer through the ocean of time opening on us. And never could we embark upon it under circumstances more auspicious. Our first and fundamental maxim should be, never to entangle ourselves in the broils of Europe; our second, never to suffer Europe to intermeddle with cis-Atlantic affairs."

Nearly a generation later President Polk, reaffirming the Monroe Doctrine in his message to Congress of December 2, 1845, stated that: "It is well known to the American people and to all nations that this Government has never interfered with the relations subsisting between other governments. We have never made ourselves parties to their wars or their alliances . . . We may claim on this continent a like exemption from European interference."

Half a century after this, in the famous note of July 20, 1895, which applied the Monroe Doctrine to the boundary dispute between Venezuela and Great Britain, Secretary of State Olney again emphasized the dual nature of this principle of American foreign policy. "Unquestionably," wrote Mr. Olney, it was reasoned by the Administration of President Monroe that "complete European non-interference in American concerns would be cheaply purchased by complete American non-interference in European concerns."

III.

THE PERFECT symmetry of its logic gives the Monroe Doctrine its great effectiveness as a policy. But whenever that symmetry is injured, whenever the United States assumes that it can direct affairs in Europe while denying Europe any right to direct affairs in Latin America, the essential spirit of the Doctrine is injured and its moral authority is undermined.

It was, for instance, wholly in accord with the Monroe Doctrine for the Administration, when Italy entered the war, to serve notice that "the United States would not recognize any transfer, and would not acquiesce in any attempt to transfer any geographic region of the Western Hemisphere from one non-American power to another non-American power."

It was, however, completely at variance with the letter and spirit of the Monroe Doctrine for President Roosevelt to tell former Premier Reynaud of France, a few days earlier, that "the Government of the United States will not consider as valid any attempt to infringe by force the independence and territorial integrity of France." As the wording of the Doctrine has it: "Our policy in regard to Europe is . . . to consider the government de facto as the legitimate government for us."

When the time comes for an effective international organization, with power to apply collective action against an aggressor, and when the United States is a member of that organization—then the Monroe Doctrine will automatically be merged in this larger system of security. Until that time the value of the Doctrine in maintaining the security of a limited area depends upon attention to the self-denying, as well as to the self-assertive, side of the principle so well and truly laid down by President Monroe.

Those who appreciate the enormous importance of the Doctrine at this time have therefore welcomed Secretary Hull's statement of July 6, that "The Government of the United States pursues a policy of nonparticipation and of noninvolvement in the purely political affairs of Europe." And equally appropriate has been the President's pledge, in the defense message of July 10, that "We will not send our men to take part in European wars."

That pledge was necessary, under the Monroe Doctrine, to give full force to Mr. Roosevelt's equally categorical assertion that "We will repel aggression against the United States or the Western Hemisphere."

Deafening Silence

White House Press Conference

THE DRAMA, or at least the stage for the drama, was in Chicago. But most strangely, the principal actor was still here in Washington—and apparently intending to stay here throughout the performance. For he said, in answer to a question during the press conference, that he does not intend to go to Chicago.

It was the last White House press conference before the convention sits. There has been surmise that Mr. Roosevelt would use this conference to announce what he was going to do. Anticipating that, press wires were held open, awaiting the "flash"; an unusual number of correspondents came, and they had a slight manner of rush to get into the front rows, where the expression of Mr. Roosevelt's features could be seen, if he actually made a momentous announcement.

His manner, before the conference began, bore out the notion that he might speak. There was in him none of that gay come-all-ye with which he frequently welcomes the crowd. There was none of that preliminary banter with men in the front row, which usually takes place while the crowd is assembling. On the contrary, Mr. Roosevelt looked very serious, almost grim, his cigarette holder clenched tight betweeen his teeth, making his lips seem at once tight and slightly wry, and giving his mouth the appearance of a kind of defensive determination. His eyes were upon a document in his hands, which he was reading—about what that document might be, the newspapermen made silent, excited surmises. Mr. Roosevelt continued to keep his eyes on it until the man at the door called "All in."

THEN MR. ROOSEVELT began. He said the only news he had to give out was in this document. The document was anticlimax. It was a letter from the head of the Wage-Hour Administration, Col. Philip B. Fleming; and it dealt with the question of raising the maximum hours of labor in industry, for the sake of greater output of war materials. To the newspapermen, keyed up for something more exciting, the document was rather tedious. It described the experience of the British, who found it inadvisable to increase hours per week. Finally, the long compilation of citations and figures was completed, and Mr. Roosevelt said that his conclusion was in agreement with Col. Fleming's letter—there is no present need to raise the existing hours per week.

To the newspaper men, there was in that neither personal exhilaration nor much professional nutriment—nowhere was any press waiting feverishly to roll out news about hours of labor in the munitions industry of Great Britain. If some assumed that Mr. Roosevelt read that long letter as a device for "stalling," the assumption would not be surprising. Mr. Roosevelt knew this press conference was on the eve of the coming event at Chicago. He knew that 1,100 delegates at Chicago, and millions of people throughout the country, were waiting to hear his decision. And he knew that—for whatever inner reason he has—he did not wish to speak at this time. He could have just called off the conference, avoided the 200 eyes that would bore at him, the voices that would question him. But he was too defiantly game to "duck." If, under the circumstances, he chose to gain time by reading a not very thrilling document about a remote topic, that was as good a way as any for "getting by."

BUT IN THE HEARTS of the newspaper men there was pressure of imminence; urgency clamored at them from their home offices. As Mr. Roosevelt finished his hours-of-labor disquisition, came questions about the real thing. To one question Mr. Roosevelt was, rather to the surprise of the questioner, perfectly frank and direct. "Do you expect to go to Chicago?" Mr. Roosevelt's answer was a prompt negative.

Thereupon another questioner, possibly with the intention of humor, not perfectly achieved, asked, "If you do go to Chicago, will you fly there?" That, Mr. Roosevelt said, with sustained urbanity—that was a rather dubious question, it might seem to imply a slur on the President's veracity.

Another question, rather long and intricate, was about the "Dunce Cap Club." This was, or is, so far as it has corporeal existence at all, a voluntary organization of those newspaper men who, months ago, for asking Mr. Roosevelt questions about a third term, were told to put on a dunce cap and stand in the corner. The club, so the questioner said, was going to hold a final meeting at Chicago, for the purpose of dissolution. Would Mr. Roosevelt send them a message? Mr. Roosevelt tried, with less than his usual spontaneousness of resource, to devise a wise-crack reply which should be at once apt and humorous—yet not revealing as to his intentions.

But by this time, the going was getting slippery, the spirit of the occasion less than hilarious. Some one asked whether Mr. Roosevelt would regard Chicago as an "unbossed convention," a free convention of uncontrolled delegates, as the Republican Convention at Philadelphia was said to be. That question would have been, to Mr. Roosevelt when at his buoyant best, "cat's meat." He would have eaten it up. But on this occasion his answer was too indistinct for this writer to hear—and did not excite wild laughter among those who did hear. Mr. Roosevelt seemed relieved when the questioning turned to routine matters remote from Chicago and himself, about the progress of national defense, the training of the national guard, and the like.

Books And Things

Indian Medicine

THE SOUTH AMERICAN Indians have no white-tiled medical laboratories, but their "witch doctors" have their own understanding of medicine. When Richard Gill's wife sprained her knee, and the two days' journey to the nearest white doctor was too agonizing to contemplate, an old Indian suggested that his people knew how to treat such injuries. They did. The knee healed with phenomenal rapidity. And Gill had discovered a vocation: "functional exploring," "ethnobotany," investigation of Indian medicine. He tells how he came to it in "White Waters and Black Magic" (Holt, $3).

A Cornell graduate who for three years taught English at Lafayette, Gill, with his wife, went to the upper Amazon country for the Goodrich Rubber Co. in 1928. A year later he was carving a ranch out of the jungle on the Pastaza River, east of the Andes in Ecuador—coffee and castor-oil plants and cacao. One day on a bend in the trail where the purple, vanilla-scented orchids hung deep on the bank, his horse shied. Gill fell. It seemed for a minute as if his backbone had been squeezed by a giant press; it seemed that night as if a tight belt—which was not there at all—was squeezing his diaphragm. A week later he dropped a coffee cup. Three months later he was flat on his back in Washington, paralyzed; and the eminent specialist was muttering something to the effect that if only they had more curare, and knew more about it, maybe . . .

Curare: that was the mysterious poison that the head-hunting Jivaros and other tribes of the Amazon basin brewed, in which they dipped their long arrows, with which they killed game and, sometimes, men. Gill had seen it brewed, a few ridges downriver, beyond reach of missionaries, near his Ecuador home. He knew more about it than the eminent specialist did—except that he did not know it relieved spastic paralysis, and modified some forms of insanity. And the doctors have learned more about it since Gill went back to Ecuador in 1939 and brought out a commercial supply.

His book is partly a personal history, partly an evocation of feudal life on what some visitors called the first dude ranch in South America, and partly an interpretation of the psychology of Indian "witchcraft." The Rancho Rio Negro was a self-sustaining wilderness estate, two days from the nearest doctor but comfortably equipped, with the radio bringing Gracie Allen and Bing Crosby to the jungle. It was near enough to the Quito railroad to bring welcome and unwelcome visitors from the north, and close enough to the semiexplored Amazon territory to bring unspoiled Indians as traders and campers.

One of these was Manga Cicidgua, who, now 30 years old, is known as the Old-One-who-moves-like-lightning, a seasoned jungle man with a sense of humor; he became Gill's friend. Another was Leon Aguinda, who was half-Jivaro of the head-shrinking tribe and half of another curare-making clan; he, too, became a friend and helped Gill establish himself, aided by a flashlight that snapped off and on, as a master of white man's magic among the native witch-doctors. It was necessary, if he was to learn about curare and other drugs, that he be recognized as a fellow-craftsman.

For curare is a sacred drug, and the Indians are great ritualists. The wilder they are, the more strictly they adhere to ceremonial. Of stern necessity, Mr. Gill points out, wild men are the most ultra-conventional people in the world. "Their sheer survival depends upon their doing the same thing in precisely the same way for generation after generation in the changeless forests. And there is only one way: the right way. There is only the right way of shooting a dangerous rapids, of stalking a jaguar, of ambushing an equally nimble enemy. Any other way is death."

AMONG THE DRUGS which Gill sought in the jungle, but did not find is "avelina blanca," an utterly harmless and incredibly effective depilatory with which male Indians remove their sparse beards and the women remove the hair from other parts of their anatomy. He did find "leche de oje," a milky, rubbery sap drawn from the bark of certain trees, which the Indians use to promote digestion; "avelina rosada," a "dandrufficide" which seems to be responsible for the clean scalps and glossy black hair of the Amazonian Indians; rotenone, the insectide which is displacing the old garden insecticides in common garden use, and, of course, curare, the arrow poison concerning the medical value of which Mr. Gill and the Squibb Co. have such tremendous hopes.

"White Water and Black Magic" is something more thon the ordinary escapist travel book. Richard Gill knows and loves the jungle country, and it has a meaning through him, for the world. Abundant photographs add much to the evocative charm of his story.

The Once Over

Coming Convention

The Democrats are about to hold their convention and unveil their apprehensions over Wendell (Firpo) Willkie. If it hadn't been for him they could have held it by telephone.

• • • •

The Democratic board of strategy arranged to make the Republicans hold their convention first so they could profit by G. O. P. mistakes. But their job now is to prove that Willkie was a mistake.

• • • •

So dark is the outlook for anything dramatic at the convention that the Democrats may have to ask Wendell to appear as a guest star.

• • • •

Democratic conventions used to control all the patents on colorful and exciting conventions. Compared with Republican conventions, they used to be as the Barnum and Bailey circus stacked up against a flea circus. They had a monopoly on excitement, chaos, general disorder and the surprise element.

• • • •

A Republican convention used to be as dramatic as taking a cucumber off the ice. But this year all seems changed. The Republicans really held the Democratic convention in Philadelphia.

• • • •

What the Democrats are to hold is just another Roosevelt rally.

• • • •

And they're a little dejected about it. Democrats are never at their best approving somebody. They get into their real form when there is some knocking to be done.

• • • •

Consider what the Democrats are up against: Every hat thrown into the ring bears the same initials! Booing, denouncing, gouging and biting in the clinches are forbidden.

• • • •

Favorite sons, if any, will be mere glass balls in a shooting gallery, except that no serious attempt will be made to keep 'em in the air.

• • • •

Mr. Roosevelt has refused to refuse a third term so far, and the convention will meet under the reasonable assumption that the ring is in his hat.

• • • •

From this distance it would seem that the convention will have all the drama that goes with extending a lease or renewing a contract.

• • • •

There is so little prospect of a fight that for the first time in history the Democrats may have to import outside fighters.

• • • •

The first business will be to draw up a platform.

• • • •

Nobody will bother asking what became of the old ones.

• • • •

Then will come the test to see if "The Star-Spangled Banner" can seem any colder when sung under Democratic auspices than under Republican. Prayer will follow for the safety and preservation of everything except Elwood, Ind.

• • • •

The roll will then be called to see if all the better moral climate makers are present and accounted for. One or two musical comedy comedians will be heard from, after which the delegates will be asked to place in nomination all persons who were born at Hyde Park and educated at Groton and Harvard.

• • • •

This will be followed by the nomination for Vice President of some Democrat who doesn't mind being put in a damp, cool place with the other preserves.

Society Girls in Dutch Costumes To Aid Relief Drive at Concert

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

EVERY LITTLE DUTCH GIRL will be saying "Ja! Ja!" all over the place at the Watergate concert tomorrow evening when several of pretty debs and subdebs, dressed in Dutch costumes, give an extra dash of color to the entertainment.

They will be there to sell dainty windmills that may be used either as earrings, clips or pins—all for the benefit of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Inc.

Recently, the bevy of beauties who have agreed to lend a hand for this sweet charity have been buzzing about getting their costumes ready for the big event; and if you wonder whether they've done a good job, just take a look at the sample quintet in the picture to the right.

The entire younger set list, all of whom have promised to serve as assistant salesladies for the evening, are Miss Marilynn Himes, Miss Nancy Weller, Miss Joan McKenna, Miss Betty Ann Swagart, Miss Nancy Strong, Miss May Byrne Simpson, Miss Edith Hood, Miss Gloria Goode, Miss Virginia Pennington, Miss Patricia Hill, Miss Janet Hartz, Miss Mary Theresa Norris, Miss Marion Norris, Miss Barbara Ramseyer, Miss Leyla Deyo, Miss Molly Stonestreet, Miss Dorothy Shelton, Miss Peggy Townsend and Countess Austine Cassini.

'Big Names' Head Fund Committees

When the Washington Chapter of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund was organized, some of the Capital's biggest names agreed to head the committee. No less personage than Mrs. Roosevelt is honorary chairman, with Dr. Hans Kindler, honorary vice chairman, and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, honorary chairman of the ladies' committee.

Mrs. Chauncey G. Parker, jr., is working chairman of the latter, and Mrs. Beatrice Landheer Rose is vice chairman. Under the aegis of those two capable women, a sizable group has been put to work and, like the young ladies assisting them, will appear in Dutch costumes tomorrow evening, and also will be selling windmill jewelry right and left. They will have charge of the refreshment stand. All profit will go to the fund for Dutch refugees.

Van Loons to Visit At Legation

The general committee, or men's committee, for the organization will be well represented at tomorrow night's fete. Charles C. Glover, jr., is chairman of the group, assisted by Winslow B. Van Devanter, vice chairman; Dr. Bartholomew Landheer, secretary, and George O. Vass, treasurer.

Virtually every celebrity still in town is planning to attend the concert. The Netherlands Minister is ill and can't be there, but Mme. Loudon hopes to be present, and will be accompanied by her house guests, Hendrik Wilhelm Van Loon, the noted author, and Mrs. Van Loon, who are coming to Washington especially for the event. Mr. Van Loon has a part on the evening's program.

Following the concert, Mme. Loudon will entertain at a very small reception for the Van Loons and members of the Queen Wilhelmina Fund committees.

Tuckermans Home From Holiday at Point Lookout

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman have just returned to Tuxeden, their home in Bethesda, from a short stay at Point Lookout, Md. They had as their guests there for a day, Capt. and Mrs. Donald Bingham.

Mrs. Tuckerman has just heard from her sister, Countess Bohdan Castellane, who with her husband had a chateau in France. She reports they have reached Portugal. They hope to get passage on a ship to the United States shortly.

12 Entertained At Richbergs' Dinner Affair

The British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, was the ranking guest at a dinner given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg at their home in Spring Valley. Covers were laid for 12 and most of the guests were from out of town.

The company included Mr. and Mrs. Clay Williams, of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whiteside, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wilkinson, of New York; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Adams, of Southampton, Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Richberg will leave Washington on July 28 for Butte, Mont., where they will visit her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde E. Weed. From there they will motor to Canada and later they will go to San Francisco for a visit. Accompanying them will be their daughter, Eloise. The three expect to return to Washington the middle of September.

Jean Courier To Be Wed

The marriage of Miss Jean Courier, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Frank Courier, of Chase City, Va., and Grant Tolley will take place on July 19 at the home of the bride's parents. It will be an unostentatious ceremony with only members of the two families witnessing it. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Tolley, of Georgetown.

Immediately following the wedding, the couple will leave for Denver, Colo. From there they will go to San Francisco, where they will live. Mr. Tolley, who was graduated from the University of California, is with the Western division of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

Welleses Leave For Convention This Evening

The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles will leave this evening for Chicago, where they will attend the Democratic National Convention. They will stay at the Drake Hotel.

Mr. Welles is a Maryland delegate, and Mrs. Welles "wouldn't miss a convention for anything." Both are afraid, however, that they won't be able to stay until the end, as Secretary of State Hull will be leaving Wednesday or Thursday, and the Undersecretary may have to be back at his desk then.

Mrs. Patton Gives Party for Niece

Mrs. Edwin Russell Patton entertained at a garden party yesterday afternoon in honor of her young niece, Miss Nancy Leighton Hale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Winslow Hale, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who is spending two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Patton.

The party was given on the lawn of the Pattons' attractive English home in Sligo Park Hills, Md.

Mrs. Lord Entertains

Mrs. Robert O. Lord entertained at luncheon yesterday at Ranleigh, where she and Mr. Lord, who recently arrived here from Detroit, will make their temporary residence. Ranleigh, in nearby Virginia, is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Lee.

Mr. Lord has been commissioned by the Government in connection with the national defense program.

Daughter of Truman Newberry, who served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the Administration of President Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Lord is well known to members of Washington society.

Among her guests yesterday were Mrs. Joseph Himes and Mrs. Melville Church, jr., who with Mrs. Lord, are working on plans for a special benefit entertainment for the American Women's Voluntary Services.

Dinner Is Given By Miss Perkins For Turner Battle

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, entertained at a dinner party last night at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of Turner Battle, who has been assistant to the Secretary for several years. Mr. Battle will leave shortly to take a position in the Justice Department.

Guests at the dinner party included Miss Katherine Lenroot, Miss Mary Le Dame, Miss Frances Jurkowitz, Gerard Reilly, V. A. Zimmer, J. V. Fitzgerald, I. F. Wixson, E. J. Shaughnessy, T. B. Shoemaker, Isador Lubin and L. Metcalf Walling.

Dr. Rowe Goes To Havana Parley

The Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe, has left for Havana to attend the second meeting of the ministers of foreign affairs of the American republics.

Accompanying Dr. Rowe are Dr. William Manger, counselor, and Dr. William Sanders, chief of the juridicial division of the Pan American Union.

Ellis Haworths On Honeymoon At Bolton Landing

Dr. and Mrs. Ellis Haworth are spending their honeymoon at the Sagamore Hotel, Bolton Landing, N. Y. The bride is the former Miss Elaine Irvin, of Washington, formerly of Columbus, Ohio. She and her husband were entertained at a speedboat ride to Paradise Bay and a steak roast on Dollar Island Thursday evening.

Upon their return to Washington, Dr. and Mrs. Haworth will make their home at 6330 Thirty Second street. He is a professor of science at Wilson Teachers College.

Col. F. J. Morrows Honored at Dinner

Lady Bradford Leslie, who has returned from Warm Springs to her apartment at the Shoreham for a few days, entertained at dinner last evening on the Shoreham Terrace in honor of Col. and Mrs. Frank J. Morrow.

In the company were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Clifford L. Corbin, Sir Owen and Lady Chawkley, Capt. and Mrs. John Parker Jackson and Mr. Clarence Hewes.

Newmyer-Smith Nuptials Held at St. John's Church

Agnes Newmyer Wed to Rev. R. U. Smith In Candlelight Ceremony; Couple To Live in Flint, Mich., After Trip

At a candlelight ceremony last evening, Miss Agnes Stuart Newmyer became the bride of the Rev. Richard Upshur Smith in St. John's Episcopal Church. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Edwin Jonathan Newmyer, of this city. Rev. Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Upshur Smith, of St. Paul, Minn. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart officiated at the 5 o'clock ceremony. Vases of white gladioli, asters and larkspur adorned the altar for the double ringle service. Karg Elert played the wedding march.

Given in marriage by her cousin, Melville B. Cox, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory mousseline de sole. Made over taffeta, the frock was fashioned with a bodice of duchess lace with rose-point inserts. She wore elbow-length lace mitts. Her finger-tip veil, of bridal illusion, fell from a cap held by a wreath of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a diamond brooch, which had been the wedding gift of her father to her mother. She carried a prayer book, a gift of the bridegroom, decked with gardenias and showered with ribbons and baby's breath.

Juliet Ernst Is Maid of Honor

Miss Juliet E. Ernst, of Chicago and Larchmont, N. Y., served as maid of honor. She wore a green chiffon gown with a shirred bodice and a matching velvet ribbon hat. Elbow-length mitts of rose completed her ensemble. She carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses.

The bridegroom's twin brother, John Upsher Smith, served as best man. Ushers were young clergymen, all classmates of the bridegroom at the Virginia Theological Seminary, class of '39. They were the Rev. T. Norman Mason, of Philadelphia; the Rev. Marshall Milton, of Herndon, Va.; the Rev. Richard Radne, of this city, and the Rev. Richard Rossman, also of this city.

To Make Home in Michigan

The bride's mother wore a lavender printed chiffon dress with white accessories and a corsage of lavender and white asters. Mrs. Smith chose a dusty rose ensemble and pink asters for the occasion.

When the couple left for their honeymoon to New York and Cape Cod, the bride wore a pale blue silk redingote suit and navy blue hat. Upon their return they will live in Flint, Mich.

Out-of-town guests for the ceremony included Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Dewey and Jack Dewey, of Flint; Miss Anna Hale, of Long Island; Miss Marjory Evans, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Ely, of Long Island, and Edwin N. Lew, of New York.

The bride attended the University of Wisconsin. The Rev. Mr. Smith was graduated from Carleton College, Minnesota, and Harvard School of Business Administration and Virginia Theological Seminary. He resigned from the Federal Trade Commission in 1936 to study for the ministry.

Luncheon Honors Senora de Ledon

Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Ambassador of Mexico, was the ranking guest at a luncheon given yesterday at the Mayflower by Miss Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, who entertained in compliment to Senora Amalia de Castillo Ledon, Mexican poetess and feminist leader.

Among those present were Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic; Senora de Fernandez, wife of the Minister of Paraguay, and Senora de Vega, wife of the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation.

Barbara White Becomes Bride

The marriage of Miss Barbara Lewis White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walker Gibson White, and Ensign John Lonam Erickson, U. S. N., took place yesterday in Douglaston, Long Island. Witnessing the ceremony were the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Hollis White, of this city, who was accompanied by Mrs. George Weed Wallace, her sister, and Mrs. William Lewis Pitcher, both of Washington.

The 4 o'clock ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Aloysius C. Dineen. Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in a pale blue ensemble with a matching picture hat and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Sally Page Williams, of Great Neck, Long Island, wearing a gray ensemble and corsage of lavendar orchids, served as maid of honor. Ensign Paul G. Schultz, of New Mexico, was best man.

Following their honeymoon, the couple will live in Pensacola, Fla. The bride attended Friends Academy in Locust Valley, Long Island, and Spence School, in New York. The bridegroom attended the University of Nebraska before entering the Naval Academy.

Mrs. Gordon Visits E. R. Finkenstadts; Seeks D. C. Home

Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt have as their guest for a few days Mrs. English Gordon, of Philadelphia. While here Mrs. Gordon, who with her mother, Mrs. Frederick W. English, will close her home in Philadelphia soon, is looking for a house here.

The two propose to spend the winter in the Capital. Mrs. Gordon has many friends here, having spent a good deal of time in Washington recently. She was formerly the wife of Basil Gordon, Mrs. George Barnett's son. She has known Mrs. Finkenstaedt since school days and is a godmother to Mrs. Finkenstaedt's debutante daughter, Sita.

Lady Lindsay At North Shore

Lady Lindsay, who staged a party in honor of the rulers of England last year with great eclat, when her husband, Sir Ronald, was British Ambassador, is now playing the role of landlady to a group of North Shore young marrieds.

Miss Irene Boyle, who was prominent in the background when Lady Lindsay was chatelaine of the embassy, is now visiting her former employer at Hidden House, her Oyster Bay estate. Sir Ronald, who left for England shortly after retiring, was not accompanied by his wife, the former Elizabeth S. Hoyt.

Today Lady Lindsay will be guest of honor at a cocktail party to be given by members of the board of the newly founded Eastover Swimming Club on swank Center Island, N. Y. As a daughter of the late banker, Colgate Hoyt, Lady Lindsay inherited the property on which the clubhouse stands. S-o-o-o she has rented 40 acres not far from the Sewanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club to a group of North Shore families who want a simple spot for swimming and picnicking.

C. D. Smitherses Leave for Stay At Saranac Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher D. Smithers have left for Saranac Lake, N. Y., to remain at the Saranac Inn until after Labor Day. They have been occupying their place, Dunrobin, at Locust Valley, N. Y., since May.

Their grandchildren, the family of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brinkley Smithers, of Reisertown, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. E. Bonner Bowring, of Roslyn, N. Y., will visit them during the summer.

Mrs. Smithers has announced that the annual rummage sale for the Country Home for Convalescent Babies at Sea Cliff, Long Island, will be held again this year in October. From now until that time there will be a building on the Smithers estate available for the collection of articles for sale.

Report Made On Working Of Wives

Dr. Ruth Shallcross Declares Need Basis For Employment Of Women Is Unfair

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Yesterday, at the final session of the board of directors of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Asheville, N. C., Dr. Ruth Shallcross, director of research, reported on a study conducted during the past year as to the effects—economic, sociological and psychological—of married women's gainful employment.

"The conclusion can unhesitatingly be made," said Dr. Shallcross, "that the employment problem will not be solved, as some maintain, but putting the employment of married women on a need basis. While data from the 1940 census are essential to show the details, we know from labor market studies that much of the unemployment has been in the heavy industries, where women, married or single, have not been employed in large numbers. The consumer and service industries where most women are employed have not suffered in the depression nearly so much as have heavy industries."

Need Concept Called Unfair

"Before legislation against married women's employment is passed," said the reports, "society must determine if families where wives must work in order to raise the standard of living should be forced to accept a subsistence standard for employment when other families who do not need the wife's earnings are allowed to rise above the subsistence level. Such legislation is, in essence, discrimination against those families who can raise their standard of living only by having the wife contribute her earnings to the family.

"Americans have prided themselves on living in a democratic country where the right to enter a particular labor market and where the opportunity to improve one's economic status are not denied. Unless we want to see complete state control of job placements (the laws affecting married women would mean state control of job placement for married women), as is evidenced in the totalitarian countries, eliminating, as it would, freedom of vocational opportunity, each citizen must guard the right of every other to make this free choice. It is fallacious to assume that a country can become richer by failing to use its best workers, male or female, married or single, or by denying to any group the opportunity of being productive in a way individuals composing that group shall decide."

Working Wives Don't Neglect Homes

Dr. Shallcross' report says that "generally speaking, where the husband and other members of the family are cooperative and well integrated, and where the decision for the wife's working has been mutual within the family, there is little evidence of neglect of the home and children."

Those who have written most on the subject have agreed, Dr. Shallcross points out, that the ideal arrangement is that married women should work only part time and not at all when their children are very small.

"If maternity leaves and insurance are a part of the policy of an organization employing married women and if the community provides day nurseries where mothers, while working, may leave their children under the care of trained women," says the report "many of the ill effects of the wife's working now found among those of the very lowest income brackets will be nullified."

It urges school training of both boys and girls for homemaking with stress on the mutual responsibility a home entails.

"Sociologists and psychologists seem agreed," it says "that in order to stabilize the home both boys and girls of high school age need educational training on the following: Care of children, physiology, managing a home and definition of a home, sex matters, food values and how to market, and a technical knowledge of some skill or trade.

"These findings indicate the growing opposition to married women's gainful employment; they also show this opposition to be based on emotion and prejudice rather than on exact knowledge of the facts. The material from many sources summarized briefly in this report leads us to conclude that little gain and considerable harm would result from legislation restricting married women's employment."

Red Cross Units Schedule Meetings

The foreign surgical dressing unit of the Twentieth Century Club, which has been actively engaged in making surgical dressings for the past year at the Red Cross Chapter House, now meets twice weekly at the Red Cross headquarters in the Walsh mansion on Massachusetts avenue. The new hours are each Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock and each Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Lawrence Martin is the new president of the club, and Mrs. Alfred H. Brooks, newly elected first vice president, is supervisor in charge of Red Cross surgical dressings. Members of the club are urged to join one or both of these units.

Another organization whose members are actively engaged in doing Red Cross work during the summer is the D. C. Chapter of the P. E. O. Sisterhood, of which Miss S. Elizabeth Reynolds is president. So great has been the response to the call for volunteers that an evening unit has been formed in addition to the day units. The units meet in Linthicum Hall, 3116 O street, each Monday evening from 7:30 to 9:30, and each Wednesday morning from 9:30 to 12:30.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom left yesterday for New York and will go from there to visit friends in Massachusetts. They will return to Washington in a few days.

Col. and Mrs. P. A. Capron, who are en route from the Puget Sound Navy Yard to New York are spending a few days at the Mayflower Hotel.

Commander and Mrs. Hamilton Bryan and Miss Annie Bryan are at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York for a brief stay.

Miss Alberta Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Freeman Little, of Owensboro, Ky., and her brother, Wilton Lambert Little, have come from Richmond, Va., for a visit with Mrs. Geneva Dunham in her apartment at the Shoreham.

The Count and Countess de Trampe, of Philadelphia, are spending the season at the estate of Mrs. Charles South, at Bluemont, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley I. Sauter were dinner hosts last evening to a group of 12 at their home in Kenwood, Md.

Honor guests at the dinner party were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sauter, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., who are house guests at the Kenwood Sauters over the week-end.

Mrs. Julius Lutley is in New York for a week's visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hechinger will leave today for Swampscott, Mass., to spend the remainder of the summer at the Hotel Preston.

T. R.'s Widow Returns To Brooklyn, Conn.

Mrs. Edith Kermit Roosevelt, widow of President Theodore Roosevelt, has gone to Brooklyn, Conn., to stay at the ancestral home, Mortlake Manor. She has been at Sagamore Hill, Cove Neck, Oyster Bay, Long Island.

Mrs. Roosevelt will return on August 6 in time to celebrate her birthday with members of the family at Oyster Bay. She will be 79 years old.

Fall Prophetics—The Wool Suit and Hat

Stylists predict a gala future for woolens this fall, especially since they will be all-American woolens, tissue-thin in contrast to former heavy British tweeds. Wool will go to the head and into every part of the costume. Above is one of the smart advance wool hats, draped of jersey for town or country wear. Although intricate looking, this tailored toque could be produced by your own milliner. It would lend a formalizing note to the Glenurguhardt wool suit at right. The lightweight suit has a box pleated skirt and well-cut jacket. An indispensable for first fall days and smarter than ever combined with woolen bag, hat and wool accessories.

Grandma Needn't Look Like a Robin

Proper Exercise Will Streamline Enlarged Abdomen

By Ida Jean Kain

A 4-YEAR-OLD of our acquaintance came out the other day with surprise question No. 600. "Why is it," she demanded, "that robins and grandmas have big stomachs?"

For a fact, grandma would be better off for a little streamlining! The middle-aged spread just isn't healthy. We have it on medical authority that it may even be a cause of high blood pressure.

When the abdominal wall muscles become flabby, they not only collect fat but they are unable to support the weight of the organs so that they sag and crowd each other. This interferes with the circulation of the blood, the digestion and the elimination. Aside from the squeezing of the organs, the nerve centers are seriously affected and high blood pressure may result.

Real Cause Disregarded

Age has nothing to do with the flabbiness of the abdominal wall. It is caused by lack of exercise. But flabbiness is so characteristic of the older figure that it is apt to be considered natural and it's real cause disregarded.

The notion that the stomach must be held in may be somewhat responsible for the tendency to accept the middle-aged spread as natural. Try holding your stomach in—you will find it most uncomfortable. But any idea that does not work is usually wrong, and this is no exception. The rule should be to hold up with the lower abdominal muscles. The upward pull which originates in the lower abdominal wall should extend right on up through the crown of the head so that the chest is lifted and the chin level. That's exercise in itself.

But before you can make a habit of this upward pull, the entire muscular girdle must be strengthened with corrective exercises. These need not be strenuous or take more than a few minutes, but they should be done daily.

Try This One

Whether you are fat or thin, young or old, you need a few of this type:

To avoid any strain, the initial exercises should be taken lying on the back on the floor with knees flexed, feet on the floor.

From that position, bring alternate knees to chest as you press the small of the back against the floor and pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. Repeat ten times in all.

Remaining in the same position, raise the feet slightly off the floor and spread the knees wide apart to form a V. Hold for a second and bring the knees together. Repeat four times, then rest.

Now roll over and lie face downward on the floor with arms and legs fully extended.

Roll across the stomach, over on the side of one hip, back across the stomach and over on the other hip, rolling eight times. Hold the feet slightly off the floor while rolling.

Still lying face downward, legs and arms fully extended, raise the right leg, cross it over the left and touch the toes to the floor. Keep the leg straight and point the toes hard. Alternate the legs, getting a good diagonal stretch each time. Repeat ten times.

Girl Loves School Teacher, to Her Astonishment, But Feels It Wouldn't Be Right to Marry Him; Academic Way of Life Goes Against Her Grain

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago I started teaching in the deep South, much against my better judgment. All my training had been in journalism, and I had worked for a while on a metropolitan newspaper. I left the newspaper (which was quite a mistake) to study playwriting at a well-known university. I contrived some plays that weren't so bad; at least, they were staged by amateur groups; but my newspaper job was gone,—and I had loved it.

So I started teaching; with no intention of staying at it. And I met, of all things, a man school teacher,—always heretofore my idea of something sad. (At that time, I was insufferably cocksure). A friend of mine was in love with him, and that's how we got together; (or maybe it would have happened, anyway.) We hadn't liked each other any too well at the start, but we were thrown together frequently that first year.

Contrary to my original plan, I went back there last fall. Actually, I think I was almost afraid I would get a job elsewhere, which was silly, as I am really allergic to teaching. I've made myself into a competent teacher, but the tempo of the life is all wrong for me.

During the past year I have been with this man almost constantly, afternoons and evenings. He's meant so much to me. He's fine and good, and very smart; a swell, all-around person. I had never known anyone with whom I could be such friends, and I think maybe I've grown a little nicer through knowing him.

When summer came, I hated to leave him and cried a little. But I hoped that now, maybe, I could decide,—away from him,—whether I wanted, or intended, to marry him. He had been asking me for a year and a half. Last summer I thought I had made up my mind. In fact, I said, "no." But then we were both so sad that I took it all back and the status quo was reestablished.

While I never tire of his company, I just can't seem to feel it is right to marry him. Sometimes I think I've got to get back to my real profession, of writing. I tell myself that I'm mildewing where I am. And then I tell myself that he's fine and together we'll do fine and the rest doesn't matter.

In such a mood, I got engaged to him again a week ago (by long-distance telephone). For two days I was very happy; perhaps it was the relief from indecision; and then I started worrying again. Can one be doing the right thing in marrying a man in that frame of mind?

Sometimes I think I want the calm of marriage to him, and other times I feel the whole system of life which he represents is wrong for me, and that if I undertook it I'd make us both miserable. Should I go back to my other work for a while—and see if I have been using him as a substitute consolation, just because he's so darn sweet? Or had I better settle down to what he offers, while there is some hope of adjusting myself?

ANTONIA N.

More Advantages Exist Than Girl Perceives

DEAR A. N.: Your indecision stems, of course, from your psychological immaturity. You have been parasitically exploiting the man's devotion, simply because you aren't adult enough to either take him or leave him. You shrink from finalities and you are afraid to commit yourself to supposedly life-lasting responsibilities. Also, I conjecture, you have dreamed (as intensely imaginative adolescents usually do) of love's thundering into your life on a white charger and bearing you off to a dazzling destiny—so that you are blind to the reality when it strolls through a door in professional guise, and invites you to settle down on a small town side street.

Yes, I think you are in love with this man, in the real sense of loving, insofar as you are capable of experiencing that beneficent emotion at your present slightly arrested stage of development. And since already you have "grown a little" through association with him, it is altogether likely that you would (or, at least, could) develop to your maximum possible psychological stature if you were to become his wife, in mind and spirit, as well as in fact.

By this, I mean that you should embrace his way of life wholeheartedly and resourcefully, supposing you marry him. I mean you shouldn't feel that you are condescending; or that you would be forfeiting remote chances of becoming a celebrity or achieving a "career." On the contrary, if you must philosophize about the matter, you should be astonished and grateful at having found "the pot of gold at the rainbow's end," in the last place on earth you would have expected to come across it. For I believe that is what the rapprochement amounts to, if properly evaluated and logically developed.

Your off-again, on-again address to the writing profession bespeaks no more than a dilettante's tepid enthusiasm, as yet. But quiet-paced marriage to a man who is "fine and good and very smart; a swell, all-around person;" one with whom you can be the best of friends and of whose company you never tire,—such a marriage to such a man is better calculated to promote your growth as a serious artist than Bohemian drifting ever would. It should enrich your understanding and stabilize your performance,—giving you something to say as well as an oasis of peace in which to perfect the form of expression.

Well, that's my view of the situation; but I don't wish to take the position of shoving you overboard into a marriage that you're unsure about. My concluding advice to you is to reach your own decision—after weighing the proposal in the light of these reflections that may not have previously occurred to you.

Because of your somewhat vain and vacillating nature, I daresay you will never be completely free of misgivings and speculative afterthoughts, whether you marry him or you don't. Which reminds me of what an Oracle of old is reputed to have said to a certain young man who came to inquire: "Should I, or should I not, marry?" The Oracle replied, "My son, whichever you do, you will regret it." I expect this applies equally to you. M. H.

1941 Girl No 'Cutie', Predicts Miami Writer

Mrs. Grace S. Hall Sees Girl of Future A Real Helpmate

By Genevieve Reynolds

FORERUNNER of the future—the 1941 All-American Girl will be a new personality, entirely different from her predecessors. She will be mechanically minded, career-bent, resourceful and an active participant in world events. Moreover, she will be a pioneer in a new mode of living.

This is the prediction of Mrs. Grace Stone Hall, Miami newspaper woman and radio commentator, who recently visited Washington on her annual summer trek North. She is a member of the Newspaper Woman's Club of New York and a charter member of the Pan-American League of Florida. Mrs. Hall is scouting around for recruits for her All-American Fashion and Beauty Show of the All-American Air Meet, scheduled for Miami in January. Candidates for this forthcoming beauty and fashion show will be chosen from career groups in all sections of the country.

Outmoded Types

"We are fast moving in development of the new girl of the day," said Mrs. Hall. "The cutie is out—gone from the landscape. The dear little ingenue is no more. The blues girl is an irritant, tolerated at times but waning rapidly. Also passe are the jitterbugs, 'gag' girl, and the cemented business girl. These had their moments and served their purpose. That severely tailored business girl of yore helped the business girls of today find a more pleasant place in a labyrinth of occupations."

But the all-American of tomorrow will face a new world with changed conditions. Again she will be a pioneer in a country of established institutions. As times change and the easy-going era (now passing) slips into economic intricacies, she will do double duty—fulfill her place in the outside world and hold her position in the home.

No Sentimentalist

Further speculating on qualities of the new type girl, Mrs. Hall pointed out, that she would not be a sentimentalist, who dreamily sits on the porch sighing for the man of the moment to come by, but would be 'as adorable as ever when love and moonlight find her."

"No deference will be paid the new girl because of her sex," explained Mrs. Hall. "Feminity will be no pass word to special considerations for this girl. She will shoulder burdens along with the men—be it driving trucks or working in factories. One thing this pioneer woman will do is to perpetuate ideals in a predominately mechanical world. Her manner will be straightforward and natural.

"And I do hope," added Mrs. Hall, "this girl will preserve a sense of humor and that as a true daughter of Eve she will be concerned with fashion and beauty even though some sort of uniform apparel will be in order."

Fifth Column Panic Recalls War of 1898; Matrimony Knocks Off Airline Stewardesses

New York, July 10.

ONE OF OUR national characteristics, living as we do so many wet miles from other decadent trouble centers, is that we succumb to the more ridiculous sorts of panic when the world explodes. This is especially true of metropolitan New York at the present, and there is ample reason for much caution and common sense, but it is nothing new in our history. Only fresher, and less silly.

The antics of the Eastern seaboard during the tiff with Spain, drolly miscalled a war, were unbelievable, but are historic facts. Spain, in '98, possessed about seven incomplete, half-armed and second-rate cruisers. But the whole East went nutty. Every Congressman demanded forts and warships to protect his fishing village or summer resort from the vicious Dons. There couldn't have been an effective Spanish warship anywhere near our coast, but the poor dizzy Navy Department had to exhume a lot of aged Civil War monitors to protect the robber barons of Newport from the non-existent armada of Castile.

Now we are in for it again around here. Not as dumb, perhaps, but still real. Every old family butcher with a faintly Teutonic name seems to become a fifth column suspect. Suburban Long Island is especially daffy. A respectable baker of the town of Great Neck was whispered about as a harborer of the Nazi Bund. The fellow, named Uhlemann, of German birth but American citizenship, offered $500 to anyone who could prove these charges, nobody could. The island is spy-conscious because of many areas quite largely peopled with folks of Germanic origin, and because many Army and Navy centers, air fields and factories are located there.

Mark you, I'm perhaps more aware than some of the need for constant vigilance at the moment. Things and people go on that only our own Army Intelligence and Brother Hoover's boys know. At the same time, I hope that we can still stamp out the reptiles among us without falling into the hapless hysteria that gripped many in '98—yes, and in '17.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The great airlines, as usual, are having a hard time keeping the ships manned, or womaned, with beauteous stewardesses. Matrimony knocks them off, in droves. United, for instance, hired its 600th girl not long ago, in the pretty person of Carolyn Jones, R. N. Of the lot engaged in 10 years, no less than 375 have married and quit, even though the line has a rule that the girls can't marry for a year. That line has 165 girls at work all the time, and Ruth Fiekke, boss stewardess of the Eastern division, tells me that only 1 girl out of 35 applicants gets a job aloft.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Summer Baths

BATHS are a refuge from midsummer heat and exhaustion. They can be an art, a ritual, a heat remedy, a psychological and a beauty aid. Besides rejuvenating the spirit they beautify the skin.

To be practical as well as esthetic, vary your bath according to your needs. If your feet are puffy or swollen and you feel prickly all over bring out the old box of epsom salts. Dump in two heaping handfuls of the salts and cover with cool to tepid water. Scrub your face with soap and water and sink into the tub of water. Relax for 15 minutes, then scrub hard with a bath brush or rough wash cloth. Run hot and cold water alternately over your feet. Dry yourself with a big rough bath towel, rubbing vigorously to stir up circulation. Complete the rub-down with alcohol or cologne.

If you want a stimulating bath, fill the tub with warm water. While the tub is filling, rub vigorously with table salt. Pour your favorite bath oil into the tub and scrub the face and body with soap and water and a fairly stiff brush. Follow up with a cold shower or a cologne rub-down.

There's a whole new set of bath preparations on the market in "Water Nymph." This chilled-ermine bath foam lathers abundantly and encircles you in a wreath of invigorating bubbles. Rinse the tub of foam and fill a fresh one with tepid water and pour in a few drops of perfumed oil. Then souse yourself with toilet water from head to toe.

Luggage Hints For That Trip You're Planning

What shall we take to keep our luggage problem simple and ourselves well-groomed and perfectly dressed for every occasion? Sportswear—For suits gabardine, flannel for shorts and slacks; if you are doing mountains, or sea, or cruising, wool is best—cool by day and warm by night.

Among the most important articles are a three-quarter length woolknit cardigan and a jacket of flannel, light tweed or gabardine, to wear nonchalantly swung from the shoulder. A good medium-weight tweed traveling coat and hat to match are wonderful backlogs for travel—by night or day.

The interchangeable suits of light wool, linen or cotton, with shirts and shorts and skirts that match or contrast are excellent because they give variety and the sense of change at a minimum of cost and space. The cardigan and jacket can be pressed into evening service over an organdie or muslin or chiffon evening dress, and either is particularly good over your cotton evening dresses.

A sheer wool evening tailleur with frilly collars and cuffs is wonderful for mountain resorts where it is very cool at night. Good for the World's Fair on either coast, because when the sun goes down in the Flushing Meadows or in San Francisco Bay it's down and out, and your little wool tailleur is not only extremely smart but extremely practical.

Decoration Defined

A literary defense of decoration . . . Carlyle called it the first spiritual want of man, while Tolstoy defined art as a medium for communicating emotion. Throughout all the ages, religion has been the inspiration of the greatest art and ornament.

Summer Apple Dishes Brighten Menus

SUMMER apples are appearing on the market now. It is time to enjoy their fresh piquant flavor in apple sauce, apple pie, apple crunch, in old-fashioned apple dumplings and also in fried apples.

Apples are an excellent source of vitamins. Much of their vitamin value can be conserved in cooking if several precautions are followed. A certain amount of vitamin loss during cooking is unavoidable, but the following suggestions will help to preserve quantities of these protective substances. Use as little water as possible. Raise temperature to boiling point as rapidly as possible. Cook quickly. Don't stir air into apple while cooking. Don't put apples through a sieve while hot. Baking seems to preserve a maximum of the vitamin content in apples.

Either baked apples or apple sauce with hot buttered biscuits, makes appetizing food for breakfast. And the fine fresh flavor of summer apples should be allowed to speak for themselves and not hidden behind too much spice.

Apple Crunch is as crispy as the name suggests. It is just the type of dish in which to use tart apples successfully. The recipe for it follows:

Apple Crunch

Pare, core and slice tart apples to make 3 cupsful. Place them in a deep buttered ovenproof dish. Sprinkle over them, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, ½ cup sugar, either white or brown, and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon. Combine 2 cups lightly crushed cornflakes with 4 tablespoons melted butter and 2½ tablespoons sugar. Pack this mixture firmly over the apples. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 400 degrees, for about 30 minutes. Serve with or without cream.

Odd Jobs:

Maryland's Only Woman Mayor Lacks Machine, but Gets All Votes

By George Thorpe

MARYLAND'S only woman mayor is a politician without a machine, but she is the unanimous choice of her Glen Echo electorate.

No campaign nor "organization" was required to sweep dark-eyed, popular Mrs. Beulah H. McCuen back into office in May. Although no other candidate saw fit to file against her, 63 of her fellow citizens turned out to reelect her with a bouquet of complimentary ballots.

But taking office on a family rebound eight months before, Her Honor met a baptism of fire that presaged anything but a placid regime.

August 15,1939, Henry T. McCuen, husband of the incumbent, resigned the mayoralty he had held 16 years because of the Hatch Act forbidding Government employes to hold local office. McCuen is supervisor of the Friendship branch of the District Postoffice.

Immediately the town council of Glen Echo named Mrs. McCuen to serve out her husband's unexpired term. She accepted quietly, promising to carry on the family's Jeffersonian Democratic tradition, but a former council member was less sanguine about the appointment.

Charges and countercharges echoed down Conduit road as the former councilman declared Mrs. McCuen's appointment was "illegal." He claimed only a council member could be named to fill the vacancy.

Council members declared in turn that Mrs. McCuen had been appointed to the council and mayoralty successively.

The objector said he spoke for the taxpayers and threatened an injunction when the mayor performed her first official act.

McCuen supporters denied he spoke for the taxpayers and got up a petition to prove it. And so the battle raged. It ended when she pointed to "Amendment 147" of the Maryland code which states any "requisite person" may be appointed whether council member or otherwise, Mrs. McCuen said at her home, 105 Harvard ave.

Now about to begin her second year in office, Mrs. McCuen heads an administration whose key policy is economy but which incorporates some of the social philosophy of the New Deal.

"It's not so much how much how much money you have, but what you do with it," she declared, emphasizing her aim to keep Glen Echo down to the 50-cent tax rate that has given it an A-1 Dun & Bradstreet rating.

Side activities as housewife and active member of the Three Seven Democratic Club and the Ladies' Guild of the Chapel of the Redeemer don't keep Mrs. McCuen from her manifold official duties.

Besides presiding at council meetings, voting to break a tie if necessary, she assesses property, checks on tax payers, "keeps an eye on Annapolis" (seat of the State Legislature), even officiates at dogbitings and automobile crashes if her two-man police force is unavailable.

Last Halloween she inaugurated an experiment that illustrates her interest in youth. Traditionally, Glen Echo youngsters raise considerable heck on the red-letter night. Last year she appointed the more active spirits town marshals for the night and hardly a window was soaped or gate unhinged.

Morgenthau Cuts Rate On D. C. Loan

Interest Reduced On PWA's Money, To Be Repaid Over Period of 15 Years

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau yesterday reduced the interest rate on the District's $9,982,500 debt to PWA, saving the city some $4,000,000 over 15 years.

The rate of 4 per cent provided by Congress when the loan was made was reduced to 1.677 per cent by the Secretary, this reduced rate being the interest the District could have obtained by the sale of bonds to the public.

In a letter to Commissioner Hazen, Secretary Morgenthau said the reduced rate "is a fair rate of interest to include in the agreements between the Public Works Administration and the District of Columbia."

15 Years to Repay

The District will have 15 years to repay the loan. The total amount of interest under the revised rate will be $1,382,066, which will make the total repayment to PWA $11,364,566. Under the former 4 per cent interest rate the total debt would have been $15,592,373.

The Secretary was authorized and directed by Congress to determine the new rate of interest which in his opinion would be:

"The lowest interest available to the District were said District authorized by law to issue and sell obligations to the public at the par value thereof, in a sum equal to the repayable amounts of such loans and advances, maturing serially over a period of 15 years in approximately equal annual installments, including both principal and interest, and secured by a first pledge of and lien upon all the general-fund revenues of said District."

$300,000 Available

The first payment this year will be $757,516, which includes the interest of $142,516. The District has now available $800,000 in the present supply bill to repay this amount. The payments for the next 14 years will remain virtually the same.

The $9,982,500 is that portion of the total $18,150,000 provided the District for its building program, which the District must repay. The difference of the two sums was an out and out grant.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., first conceived the idea of borrowing money from the public to repay the loan to save the city money. He estimated he would be able to obtain a cheaper rate of interest than the 4 per cent set by law and thereby save the city about $2,500,000. At no time, however, did he believe he could obtain an interest rate lower than 2 per cent.

President Backs D. C.

His suggestion was approved by the Board of Commissioners, but discouraged by the Federal Budget Bureau, which felt the District should not depart from its "pay-as-you-go" procedure. The President, however, sympathized with the District. The President felt the District should not have to pay any more interest than if it borrowed from the public.

With the $18,150,000 the District has brought about many improvements to the Nation's Capital. New sewers, schools, Municipal Center and many other projects are included in the program.

News of the secretary's action was wired yesterday to Col. McCoach at the San Francisco Fair.

Meantime the Commissioners yesterday voted to retain the $1.75 real estate tax.

Smathers Waits and Walks, Then Announces 'Its' a Boy

Child Born to Senator As He Prepares to Go to Convention

Senator William H. Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, is a delegate to his party's national convention which opens in Chicago Monday.

But last night his mind was far from matters of state, politics and the third term. He paced the corridors of City Hospital in Atlantic City for 7 hours and 20 minutes—then emerged to announce his wife had given birth to a 9-pound boy.

Mrs. Smathers, whom the Senator married in 1938, is the former Miss Mary James Foley, of Winterhaven, Fla. She is a graduate of St. Mary's College, Raleigh, N. C., and of Rollins College at Winter Haven.

The Senator told the Associated Press that both baby and mother were "apparently doing well."

"And as soon as I'm sure they're all right," I'm going to fly out to Chicago."

Smathers is a member of the Democratic National Convention's resolutions committee.

The infant was named James Foley Smathers after his mother and his maternal grandfather. Smathers said that if the child had been a girl it would have been named Fairfax Virginia Smathers, after the town where he and Mrs. Smathers were married in 1938.

The Senator, now 50 years old, said, "I feel as if I were just starting life over again." He has seven children by a previous marriage.

He said Senators Carter Glass, of Virginia; Alvin Barkley, of Kentucky, and John Townsend, of Delaware, had pleaded with him to name the new baby after them, but "this kid isn't going to have anything to do with politics."

Private Plane Space Sought At New Airport

Airlines to Get All Hangar Space, One Capital Owner Fears

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee yesterday was asked to come to the aid of Washingtonians who own their own planes and want space to park them at the Washington National Airport.

Benjamin King, who uses his plane for business and pleasure purposes, wrote a letter to Randolph and explained that the airlines appeared to be preparing to take over all six hangars planned for the field, although he and other private fliers have urged that provision be made for privately owned aircraft.

King, who lives at the Westchester Apartments, said he has had a plane for two years, but has to park it at the Baltimore Airport because none of the flying fields around Washington have adequate storage facilities for it.

"While the Government is making every effort to promote and increase private flying and private ownership of planes, recognizing it is the backbone of aviation and the only thing that can offer stability to the aviation industry," King wrote, "little, if any, thought is given to providing facilities on the new field for taking care of private activity."

King said that the airlines appear to "have convinced those in authority that there should be no private activity on the new field," but they are, nevertheless, "now making efforts to line up some private owners to use hangars for storage at $50 a month, when the rate should be $20."

King said he thought that only the heavier private planes should be permitted to use the National Airport, as they are equipped with two-way radio apparatus and consequently could keep clear of the airliners.

The Neighborhood Garden Club of Arlington will have a picnic supper today at 4 o'clock at the home of Roger Blake, on Sleepy Hollow Road.

U. S. Reserve Building May Be Taxed

Counsel Declares Federal Board Should Pay $66,332

The $3,900,000 building and property of the Federal Reserve Board, Constitution avenue and Twenty-first street, northwest, is subject to the local real estate tax, it was decided yesterday by the commissioners.

Acting on the opinion of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, the Commissioners instructed Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent to bill the Reserve Board for the property. The tax will be approximately $66,332, it was stated.

In his opinion, however, Seal said he had "some doubt" that the assessment would be held valid if litigated "but it is believed that this question should be decided in favor of the District until and unless otherwise determined by legislation or litigation."

At the same time, Seal recommended a previous opinion of his exempting the Reserve Board from charges for water consumed, be revoked, and the water registrar be directed to remove their building from the list of those entitled to free use of water. The Commissioners also approved this recommendation.

The corporation counsel told the Commissioners "it is within the power of Congress to exempt the real property of the board from the burden of taxation."

"Since Congress has been silent on the subject and since the board's expenses are assessed against the Federal Reserve banks whose real property is not exempt from taxation, it would appear that real estate taxes may be assessed against the board's property," he said.

Heavy Showers End First Heat Wave

Heavy showers broke Washington's first summer heat wave yesterday. Fair with moderate temperatures was forecast for today and tomorrow.

From a high of 81 at 1 p. m. yesterday, the temperature dropped 17 degrees, to 64, at 10 p. m.

Motorists Fight D. C. Gas Tax Hike

Auto Club Manager Declares Proposal For 'Equalized' Levy To Be Indefensible

As plans to study proposed legislation to raise the District's gasoline tax went forward yesterday, violent opposition to such an increase broke out on the motorists' front.

"The present apparent attempt to boost the gasoline tax rate to "equalize it with the Virginia and Maryland rates," is indefensible from any reasonable standpoint," declared George E. Keneipp, District manager of the Keystone Automobile Club.

Meanwhile, Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland advised Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee that he will be glad to confer with members of a special subcommittee investigating gasoline taxes.

Highway Aid Threatened

A bill revising the local gasoline tax rate was introduced in the first session of the Seventy?sixth Congress by Randolph.

Another motor club official maintained the automobilist is already bearing his share of the tax burden and held that the proposed bill would cause the District to lose one-third of its share of the Federal aid highway fund. This would be the result, he said, of diverting the tax of 1 cent on a gallon of gas to the District's general fund, as contemplated in the bill.

Keneipp said his organization is opposed to the use of gas tax funds for any other purpose than that of improving highways and traffic conditions.

"Diversion of gas tax monies from motorists is wrong, unfair and unjust, and should be fought strenuously," he added.

Gov. Price Also Invited

Both O'Conor and Gov. James Price of Virginia have been invited to meet the subcommittee on August 6 by Representative Poage (Democrat), of Texas, the chairman.

O'Conor's letter was in reply to Randolph's communication notifying him of the appointment of a subcommittee and inviting his cooperation. The Maryland Governor had not had time to receive the invitation from Poage.

"It will, of course, be a pleasure to us to confer about these matters," O'Conor said.

"I would suggest, however, in approaching the consideration of the joint interests of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia, it would be preferable to have these questions taken up with the Maryland commission on tax revision."

Gov. O'Conor stated that the commission is engaged in studying the entire tax structure of the State.

Poage has invited the two Governors to the August 6 conference to ask for assurance that the States will improve the highways leading into Washington if Congress votes to raise the District gasoline tax.

Two Children, Man, 53, Hurt In Accidents

Seven-year-old Butler White, jr., of 63 Defrees street northwest, was struck in the 800 block of First street last night by an automobile driven, police said, by Elbert M. Faulkner, 27, of Arlington, Va. He was treated at Sibley Hospital for cuts to the head.

Eugene Patrick Yates, 11, of 472½ Maryland avenue, struck from his bicycle at Massachusetts avenue and Third street northwest, suffered severe injuries to the left leg. He was treated at Casualty Hospital. Police said the truck that hit him was driven by Carl K. Kochenon, of York, Pa.

Thomas G. Murphy, 53, of 2722 Connecticut avenue northwest, suffered hip injuries last night when hit by a car driven by Charles J. Hayden. The accident occurred at 1130 Connecticut avenue. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Conservancy Act Signed By Roosevelt

Creates Interstate Board to Control Stream Pollution; To Pro Rate Costs

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a Congressional resolution authorizing the creation of a Potomac Valley Conservation District and the establishment of an interstate commission whose job it will be to control pollution in the river.

The act permits the District, Maryland and Virginia to proceed with the formation of the conservancy district without awaiting action by Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The interstate commission will consist of three members from each signatory body and three members appointed by the President.

Besides having the duty of gathering data on pollution, the commission is authorized to cooperate with agencies of the signatory bodies in promoting uniform laws and regulations for the abatement and control of pollution in the streams of the interstate district.

It also is authorized to recommend reasonable minimum standards for the treatment of sewage, industrial or other wastes now discharged in the Potomac River or other streams in the area.

The commission will be financed on a pro rata basis by the signatory bodies.

The compact for the creation of the Potomac Valley Conservancy District has been ratified by the District, Maryland and Virginia. The present act permits the pact to become operative without awaiting approval by West Virginia and Pennsylvania, although they subsequently may join the compact.

W. F. Franklin, Legion Leader, Is Dead at 55

William F. Franklin, 55, an active member of the American Legion here and an employe of the District Government for the last 25 years, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Franklin was born in Ballylooby, Ireland, and came to this country at the age of 20. In the World War he served with the United States Army in the motor transport division. At the time of his death he was a section clerk in the Water Department.

One of the fouders of Costello Post of the American Legion in 1919, he was the second commander of the post. He was a past correspondent for the 40 and 8 veterans' organization, and was a member of the Holy Name Society and a fourth-degree Knight of Columbus. His home was at 1743 Church street northwest.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Anthony Polifka and Mrs. Harry Carlisle, of Washington, and four brothers, Thomas A., of Washington; John C., of East Orange, N. J.; Richard, Newark, N. J., and Joseph Franklin, Atlantic City, N. J.

Rev. R. E. Jope Dies 2 Months After Wife's Demise

The Rev. Richard E. Jope, 68, died of a heart attack at the wheel of his automobile yesterday, two months to the day following the death of his wife.

Engaged in evangelisic work in Pennsylvania, Mr. Jope made his headquarters at the home of his son, the Rev. Clifford H. Jope, pastor of the Ninth Street Christian Church.

The elder Mr. Jope was driving in Tenth street northeast, shortly before noon yesterday, when he was stricken. His car ran over the curb but was brought to a halt, apparently instinctively, by the stricken man. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Born in London, Mr. Jope came to this country as a child and became a naturalized citizen. He came to Washington with his son about nine years ago.

Besides the Rev. Clifford Jope, he is survived by another son, Harold Jope, of California.

Mrs. Nellie Drexel Dies in Staunton; Rites Tomorrow

Staunton, Va., July 12.—Mrs. Nellie DeLand Drexel, widow of Charles Francis Drexel, died here today after an illness of several weeks. Funeral services will be held at 5 o'clock at Trinity Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Thornrose Cemetery.

Mrs. Drexel, born in Seco, Me., traveled extensively and located in Staunton in 1920 after residing for years in Washington, where she was a member of the Newspaper Woman's Club.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Teresa D. McClintic, widow of Dr. Thomas Brown McClintic, United States Health Service; a granddaughter, Mrs. Harry W. Wilson, jr., both of Staunton; a son, Charles Francis Drexel, jr., Grand Junction, Colo.; two sisters, Mrs. William Henderson, Forest Glen, Md., and Mrs. George Price, Washington.

While in Washington, Mrs. Drexel was connected with the Treasury Department for 16 years.

Ex-G. U. Aide Dies

Worcester, Mass., July 12.—The Rev. Brother Patrick Hagerty, 77, a member of the Society of Jesus for 51 years, died today in St. Vincent Hospital. He had been in charge of infirmaries since 1884, serving 15 years at Georgetown University, 25 years at Woodstock College, Md., and 12 years at Holy Cross.

D. C. Schools to Train Adults for Defense Jobs

Vocational Study Courses Approved; U. S. to Pay Costs

Swinging into line with the 48 States on vocational preparedness, the District Board of Education yesterday approved a plan for training employed and unemployed adults in industrial jobs essential to the National defense.

Anticipating approval of the program by the Federal Office of Education, as required by law, the Board of Education's Advisory Committee on Vocational Education will meet at 2 p. m. Wednesday to set the machinery in motion.

The plan was adopted by the advisory committee yesterday morning, submitted to the board at 3:45 p. m., and approved within 5 minutes without debate. It provides:

Supplementary training courses shall be made available to persons already engaged in National defense occupations—machinists, chemists, metal workers, etc.—and pre-employment refresher courses to those wishing tto prepare for such jobs.

U. S. to Finance Program

Federal funds will be used to finance the program, under a recent $15,000,000 National appropriation by Congress. If expansion of the public school system's vocational training facilities is necessitated by the new project, the cost will have to be borne by the District, however.

The Board of Education will function as the Board for Vocational Education as administrator of the plan. Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou will be its executive officer.

Equal but separate programs will be conducted in the white and colored schools. They will be under the immediate supervision of H. A. Clark and Edgar Westmoreland, vocational education heads of divisions 1-9 (white and 10-13 (colored), respectively.

The Board of Vocational Education will determine, upon the advice of employer and labor representatives and public employment agencies, the jobs for which training shall be given, number of persons to be trained for each type of job, content of the instruction courses, and how candidates shall be selected.

Execution of the program will be in conformity with the enabling act by Congress and administrative policies of the United States Commissioner of Education.

Board to Appoint

Whatever additional teaching, custodial or other personnel is found necessary will be appointed by the board and their salaries paid out of the defense fund. The present advisory committee for vocational education, a standing group appointed by the Board of Education, will serve in the same capacity under the new project.

Members of the committee, who approved the report made public yesterday, are Austin S. Donaldson and Charles H. Fearing, employer representatives; D. C. Dow, C. F. Preller, Hilyard R. Robinson, employe representatives; Evelyn Bright Buckley, Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins and Dr. Dorothy Boulder Ferebee, home makers. One vacancy exists in the employer classification.

Next Wednesday's meeting of the advisory committee will take up such detail as the number of defense workers who can be accommodated without disrupting the regular vocational training program for school children, personnel expansion, budget problems and determination of the date for launching the program.

College Accredited

It is expected that the project, similar to others which are being organized throughout the country, will get under way here before the end of summer.

Although yesterday's meeting of the Board of Education was called especially to pass on the defense training plan, the members also approved a recommendation by Acting Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock to accredit the Junior College of National University as a junior college.

Kenilworth Gardens Tour Tomorrow

A walk through the Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens, Kenilworth avenue and Douglas street northeast, will be conducted tomorrow by Naturalist Donald E. McHenry, of the National Park Service. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Helen Fowler, daughter of the late founder of the gardens, Walter B. Shaw.

A display of hardy and tropical water lilies will be visited, and the histories and interesting characteristics of the plants will be explained by Mrs. Fowler. The tour will begin at 8:30 a. m. and last until 11 a. m.

D. C. Man's Sister Dies

Tuxedo, N. Y., July 12.—Mrs. Christina Cornell, 76, of New York City, widow of Samuel Cornell, died here yesterday. One of the survivors is George Steinmetz, of Washington, a brother.

Capital News in Brief

Anacostia Has Lone 'Prisoner'

What with the cold weather and payday long past, things were quiet last night out at Eleventh Precinct Station in Anacostia.

They had only one prisoner and, though he could give no name to be entered on the record book, he was already equipped with a number. He was a dog, a big shaggy black and brown dog of indeterminate ancestry.

This dog was locked up and provided with food, which he disdained, and water which he lapped up heartily, after a citizen far out on Good Hope road southeast called the station house to report his unexplained presence near the Skyland apartments. He was taken into custody.

Beyond a tag with Prince Georges County, Md., license No. 419, he bore no means of identification. In the absence of a claimant today, police said, he will be turned over to a humane society.

Ill Children to Get Books From Legion

Children at the Bald Eagle Mill Tuberculosis Health Camp will be given 500 children's books by Kenna-Main Unit, No. 37, American Legion auxiliary, at 6:30 p. m. today (Saturday).

The presentation will be made by Mrs. Myrtle Spudis, District Department vice president, and Miss Jerry Love, child welfare chairman of the Kenna-Main Unit. The camp is at 4900 Nichols avenue southeast.

False Fire Alarms Put Man in Cooler

Every time William Francis Phillips passed a firebox last night, he heard someone yell "fire."

"I couldn't let anybody get burned up," he explained to police who were curious about a series of false alarms in quick succession at Sixth and A, Fourth and C and Sixth and F streets northeast. At the last box, Mrs. Samuel Frank, of 520 E street northeast, told Motorcycle Patrolman A. K. Bowen, of Ninth Precinct, she saw Phillips pull an alarm box and walk off down Sixth street. Bowen collared Phillips half a block from the box.

Charged with turning in false alarms, Phillips was found to have been released recently after serving a sentence for the same offense.

Film Shows Red Cross Relief in Finland

C. M. Finnan Quits U. S. Park Service

C. Marshall Finnan, who left his position as superintendent of National Capital Parks in Washington just a year ago to become head of Bryce and Zion Canyon national parks Utah, has left the park service because of ill health.

FINNAN

His resignation was announced here yesterday as Secretary Ickes approved several appointments prompted by the Finnan vacancy. The new superintendent at Zion and Bryce Canyon parks is Paul R. Franke, who has been superintendent of Mesa Verde National Park, in Colorado.

Finnan, who took charge of National Capital Parks in 1933, had asked to be transferred to the Southwest. He has been in delicate health for several years because of a bronchial condition, which he believed the desert air would improve.

Purse Thief Gets $13, Loses Bicycle

A purse snatcher last night fled with $13 belonging to Mrs. Daisy Worton, of Norfolk, Va. But he lost his bicycle in the enterprise.

Mrs. Worton, who is visiting her daughter, Elizabeth Worton, of 1821 Sixteenth street northwest, told police she was accosted by a bicyclist on Q street, near Fifteenth. After he had grabbed her purse, he turned and ran.

Mrs. Worton called police, and they took the abandoned bike to the Third Precinct Station.

4-H Camp to Open

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 12.—Approximately 125 Four-H members and leaders are expected to attend the annual camp for the Eastern Panhandle beginning Monday morning at Camp Frame on Back Creek, near here.

Six Aliens Discharged From Municipal Jobs

A special District committee so far has found only six aliens employed in the municipal government, it was disclosed yesterday. Under the provisions of the District supply bill, they have been dismissed.

Two of the aliens were employed in the school system, one at Municipal Court, one in the Water Department, and two among the per diem workers on District construction projects. They were either Irish, British or of Canadian origin.

Should the same provision be included in the 1942 fiscal year supply bill, these persons would be eligible for reemployment provided they declared their intention of becoming American citizens, it was explained.

Man Badly Burned In Gasoline Blast

William Mansfield, 29, of 930 Fourteenth street southeast, remained in serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night. He was burned about the body when a can of gasoline exploded aboard a tugboat in the Anacostia River near the new John Philip Sousa Bridge.

Owned by the Penker Construction Co. the tug is used in connection with the construction of the new bridge. Police were unable to determine what caused the fuel to explode.

Bridge traffic was jammed for half an hour by fire apparatus which stopped on the span. Damage to the boat was slight, it was said.

Sympathetic Judge Paroles 3 Soldiers

Sympathy toward veterans because of his own service as a major in the World War A. E. F. yesterday led Justice James M. Proctor in District Court to grant probation to three soldiers convicted of assault.

Jerimino Miguel, a Filipino, accused five soldiers stationed at the Arlington cantonment, of beating him and taking $80 from him on June 1. Two of the men, Marvin L. Campbell and Thomas O. McGovern, were acquitted by a jury. Convicted of assault were Frank Pasiers, Henry Kelpacki and Hunter Gibson.

Justice Proctor said he was convinced the soldiers did not rob Miguel. He sentenced them to 60 days in jail each for assault, but suspended the punishment.

Remarking that he recalled his own military career, the justice said he wanted to give the soldiers another chance to observe law and order and to maintain the dignity of their uniforms.

Van Hyning to Take Office on Tuesday

Conrad Van Hyning, appointed recently principal assistant welfare director for the District, will be sworn into office Tuesday at 10 a. m., it was announced yesterday.

Van Hyning will be in constant touch with the many institutions under the Board of Public Welfare and will make reports to the board on needed improvements to the institutions.

Pianist Plays Music Of Defeated Nations

Miss Mildred Ellis, Philadelphia pianist, presented music of Europe's defeated nations last night in a lecture concert at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. M. C. A., 901 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

She played compositions by Coleridge-Taylor, Shubert, Mendelssohn, Sibelius, Chopin, Godard, Daniel Dett's suite, "In the Bottom," and two of her own compositions.

Pan American Plans Air Service To South Africa

Pan American Airways yesterday disclosed a move to extend its aerial empire across another major ocean, by flying mail and passengers from South America to Portuguese Guinea and thence down the west coast of Africa to the diamond and gold mining metropolis of Capetown.

It filed an application covering the plan with the Civil Aeronautics Board as one of the line's Clippers inaugurated regular fortnightly service over its new 8,000-mile route from California to New Zealand.

Pan America's latest bid for commercial supremacy of the world's international airways requests the C. A. B. to issue it a certificate of convenience and necessity for semi-weekly service from New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico, and thence either directly across the south Atlantic to Bolama, on the African coast, or by way of Para and Natal, Brazil. The application says the company would extend the service from Bolama to Capetown as soon as the neutrality act permits operation into British territory.

16-Month-Old Boy Run Over by Truck Reported Gaining

John Judson Thomas, 16-month-old son of Porter Thomas, of East Falls Church, Va., was improving at Georgetown Hosptial last night after being run over at his home Thursday by a truck owned by his father.

The truck was operated by Lucian Bowen, of East Falls Church, an employe of the elder Thomas, and not by Thomas, himself, as previously reported.

Bride-to-Be Feted at Orchard Club's Reunion

The Orchard Club of Takoma Park, which has been meeting annually for 30 years, devoted its 1940 reunion last night to honoring a charter member, who becomes a bride next week.

Ten of the club's 18 members met at the home of Mrs. Elnathan Kemper Nelson, 5 Belmont court, Sligo Park Hills, Md., and presented Miss Lucille Stockberger, the bride-elect, with a set of table silver. Mrs Dalton Leary, club president, made the presentation.

Miss Stockberger, who recently resigned as registrar of the American University School of Public Affairs, will marry Earl W. Boyer, of Philadelphia, July 20.

The Orchard Club is the outgrowth of friendships formed in a Sunday school class in the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, and derived its name from the circumstance of the first meeting 30 years ago. It took place in a shack in a Takoma Park pear orchard.

Bob Feller Pitches One-Hitter, Winning, 1-0

Dick Siebert Singles, Ruins A No-Hitter

Cleveland Ace Gains 14th Victory; Ben Chapman, Boudreau Hit Doubles to Win

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 12.—Bobby Feller held the Athletics to one hit tonight—a single by Dick Siebert in the eighth inning—to give the league-leading Cleveland Indians a 1-to-0 victory.

Feller outpitched Rookie Johnny Babich to chalk up his fourteenth victory of the campaign before 8,104 chilly fans.

For seven innings Feller pitched no-hit ball. Al Brancato, who walked with two down in the fourth, was the only Mackman to reach first until Siebert singled to center to start the eighth.

With two down Feller then walked Al Rubeling and both men advanced on a wild pitch. However, Feller bore down and whizzed three strikes past Pinch-Hitter Chubby Dean to end the A's only threat.

Altogether Feller struck out 13 batters.

Babich, seeking his eighth win, held Cleveland to six hits. The Indians' tally came in the third on doubles by Ben Chapman and Lou Boudreau. Twice, with men on second and third, he retired Hal Trosky to end Cleveland threats.

Mahan's Hit Helps Phillies Beat Bucs, 6-3

One of His Four Hits Drives in Two Runs; Pirates Rally in 9th

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 12.—Art Mahan's looping single to right with the bases filled in the fifth inning—one of his four hits—was the deciding blow which gave Philadelphia 6-to-3 victory over Pittsburgh tonight before 9,042 fans.

Singles by Merrill May and Bob Bragan and a pass to Bill Atwood by Joe Bowman set the stage for Mahan's hit, which sent two runs home and broke up a 1-1 tie. Emmett Mueller followed with another single, driving in a third run and bringing Johnny Lanning to Bowman's rescue.

As an anticlimax, the Phillies added two more runs in the ninth off big Russ Bauers, Mahan opening this rally with two down by singling. Joe Marty, Mueller and Johnny Rizzo followed with singles, chasing Baures.

Errors by Mueller and Bragan in the ninth put Pirate runners on second and third base and Paul Waner, batting for Vince DiMaggio, sent them home with a single.

Dodgers Change Line-up; Durocher To Play Shortstop

Cincinnati, July 12 (AP).—A three-game losing streak and a trio of double-headers scheduled for the next three days caused Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers to revise his line-up today.

Durocher himself will replace Pee Wee Reese at shortstop and Charley Gilbert will replace Rightfielder Joe Vosmik, but will play in centerfield with Dixie Walker, regular centerfielder, moving to right.

Two batting changes were also announced. Babe Phelps will hit in fourth place instead of Ducky Medwick, and Cookie Lavagetto has been dropped from second to seventh place.

Miss Shock Wins

Cincinnati, July 12 (AP).—Pretty Janet Shock, of Dayton, won the State women's golf crown here today by defeating Miss Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, one up on the thirty-ninth hole of a stormy play-off match.

Newsom to Face Nats; Leonard Hurls

Double Bill Is Scheduled At Stadium

Battling Buck and Bridges to Oppose Leonard, Masterson In Bargain Bill

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Battling Buck Newsom will answer the bell again today in the main bout of a double feature at Griffith Stadium. The big Detroit pitching ace who now claims the championship of the Washington press box after a bloodless coup against one out-of-condition baseball writer, will lay his 12-game winning streak on the line this afternoon.

Matters have contrived to shape themselves into a hatful of luck for Clark Griffith, who has been noting sadly that the Nats' 1940 home attentance is describing a downward curve. By the happy accident of yesterday's rain and Newsom's suddenly acquired publicity, Griffith is able to present the Nats' feature attraction of the season.

The double-header will trot out not only Newsom but Tommy Bridges as a Detroit pitcher, and the Nats will counter with Dutch Leonard and Walter Masterson.

Seeks Thirteenth in Row

Newsom is undefeated since losing his opening game of the season and will be seeking his thirteenth straight victory today. The big pitcher who was fired successively by the Nats, the Red Sox and the Browns has blossomed as the bellwether of the Detroit staff in its pennant fight and is now the owner of the best 1940 pitching record in either league.

"I guess Joe Cronin would like to have me now," smiled big Buck happily. Newsom does not conceal his bitterness for the Boston manager who traded him to the last-place Browns at a time when the Red Sox appeared headed for World Series spoils.

"Cronin never liked me and he showed it when he didn't make me the starting pitcher in the All-Star game," added Newsom. "I had twice as good a record as Red Ruffing. Honest, I didn't want to pitch if I couldn't start the game. I may not have as good a year again, and I wanted the honor of starting an All-Star game.

Buck Pans Cronin

"If he was a good manager, Cronin would have taken me out for a pinch hitter when I led off the sixth inning at St. Louis. The only thing I'm sorry about is that I made him look good by getting a clean single which was our second hit of the game."

Leonard, with nine victories against seven defeats, is behind his 20-game pace of last season and will fail to repeat that mark barring a sensational string of successes in the last half of the season. He has lost his last two starts.

The Tigers have been laboring of late due to the absence of Frank Higgins from the third-base job, but they expect to regain his services today. The Detroit club, which suddenly discovered it could win the pennant, has won eight of its 12 games with the Nats this season.

James J. Jefferies, At 65, Challenges Dempsey, Tunney

Los Angeles, July 12 (AP).—James J. Jeffries—honest, it's a fact—said today he had been reading where Jack Dempsey had challenged Gene Tunney to box for the Red Cross, and now has an offer to make himself.

"I would like to meet the winner," said the 65-year-old Jeffries, "provided either can go over four rounds. "And I'm serious about it."

Big Jim's last fight was the memorable loss in 1910 to Jack Johnson.

Hogan Gives Demaret Fight For Vardon Cup

Jimmy Leads Golf Money Winners With $8,213 Total

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 12.—Jimmy Demaret and Ben Hogan, the rival Texans, are locked in a battle for honors in the race for the Harry Vardon Trophy and the lead among money winners, Fred Corcoran, professional Golfers Association tournament manager, announced tonight.

Corcoran said the pair, who have won ten tournaments on the 1940 circuit between them, have informed him they would compete in the remaining tournaments on the summer schedule, starting with the $5,000 Chicago Open July 19-21.

A week later they clash again in the $7,500 St. Paul Open and next month will compete in the $5,000 Milwaukee Open; the $3,000 Canadian Open at Toronto; the $15,000 P. G. A. championship at Hershey, Pa., and the $5,000 Anthracite Open at Scranton.

Demaret leads the money winners at the year's halfway mark with a total earning of $8,477, while Hogan is just behind him with $8,213. Nearest to them is Byron Nelson, of Toledo, who has collected $5,313.

Hogan tops the field in the race for the P. G. A. Vardon Trophy, having compiled a total of 321 points at the halfway mark. Demaret is second in line with 287 points.

Favorites Win In Midwest Net Tourney

Brown and Kellogg To Play for Men's Singles Title Today

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Nebr., July 12.—Favorites took the spot in the Midwest tennis tournament today, with the field narrowed down after five days of play to finals in all divisions tomorrow with exception of men's singles and doubles, which are in the semi-final stage.

Ed "Lefty" Brown, Baylor, Tex., star, top seeded entrant, eliminated J. J. Fitzgerald, Omaha, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2.

Gayle Kellogg, State champion from Omaha, disposed of Lincoln's Harold Rundle, 6—3, 6—2, in just 41 minutes.

In the junior competition Frank Ragan, Omaha, threatened Wayne Anderson, Shenandoah, Iowa, for a time, but the Iowa high school champion won, 3—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Dick Richards, Kansas City high school lad, turned back Harry Dunn, Des Moines, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2, to win the right to battle Anderson for the junior championship.

Stout-hearted little Doris Popple, Des Moines, was eliminated by Marguerite Letts, St. Joseph, Mo., 6—3, 6—2.

Roy Traband, Tulsa, Okla., turned back Charles Hall, Omaha, 6—4, 6—1, in the boys' division. In the finals he will meet Bob Fromkin, Omaha, who defeated Carl Meyer, St. Joseph, 6—3, 6—2.

In the junior doubles Jack Ormsbee, Kansas City, teamed with Anderson to beat Tulsa's Ellis Garlington and Traband, 6—3, 60.

In the women's doubles Helen Gruchalla, Jamestown, N. Dak., and Muriel Wicks, Bismarck, N. Dak., defeated Janet Naylor, Salina, Kans., and Martha Smith, Kansas City, 6—0, 7—5.

Traband and Garlington beat Carl Meyer, of St. Joseph, and Fromkin, 6—0, 7—5, in the boys' doubles.

Ward Beats Goodman In Western Amateur

National Champion Scores 1 Up Victory to Enter Semifinals of Meet; Todd, Defending Titlist Triumphs by 6 and 5

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, July 12.—Bud Ward, of Spokane, National Amateur, defeated Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, former National Amateur and Open titlist, 1 up, in an 18-hole quarter-finals match of the forty-first annual Western Amateur Tournament at the Minneapolis Golf Club today.

Ward will meet Harry Todd, of Dallas, Tex., the meet's defending champion in the 36-hole semifinals Saturday. Todd advanced easily over Bill Kostelecky, of Fargo, 6 and 4.

George Victor, of Chicago, who pulled a surprise by spilling Art Doering, also of the Windy City, and co-medalist, out of the running in the morning's third round, 5 and 4, and nosed out the last of the local contenders, Earl Larson, 1 up, to enter the semifinals.

Jim Ferrier, of Sydney, Australia, Open and Amateur champion in his country, gained a hard closely fought victory over Wilford Wehrle, of Chicago, 2 up, clinching the match with a birdie three on the eighteenth hole.

Ferrier and Victor will be other semifinals opponents Saturday.

UPPER BRACKET

Bud Ward, Spokane, defeated Johnny Goodman, Omaha, 1 up. Harry Todd, Dallas, defeated Bill Kostelecky, Fargo, N. Dak., 6 and 5.

LOWER BRACKET

George Victor, Chicago, defeated Earl Larson, Minneapolis, 1 up. Jim Ferrier, Sydney, Australia, defeated Wilford Wehrle, Chicago, 2 up.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

We don't go sniffing around for morals, but one was pretty evident the other day when a Washington baseball writer was set upon and de-bloused by a gang of Detroit Tigers. The moral is, at least for all baseball writers: Value your distance from embittered ball players as you value your life.

It may be a brave venture to walk into a dressing room full of hate, but it is also a foolhardy one. The ball players are big, trained athletes and the average baseball writer is flabby, unhandy with his fists and more than likely short of breath. The contest is unequal from the outset and also on the side of the ball players is a bitterness spawning from insults fancied or real.

So we learned early in life as a baseball writer to give a wide berth to the guy who is set to knock your block off if you venture into his locker room. There, in his private quarters, he should be left to stew in his own grievances. The brash scribe who enters is inviting disaster. Ball players are clannish and they resent the intrusion of anybody in civilian clothes, honest. And if that intruder be a baseball writer who has displeased 'em, it goes double.

It's a thin line between reporting a ball game and taking a rap at one of the darlings in uniform who may have been guilty of some malfeasance, misfeasance or plain error. The baseball writer can easily become calloused to the fact that the simple statement he makes in print hits hard at the pride of the ball player and, perhaps, is keenly felt in that ball player's home. What is apt to become rote to the writer can carry an awful sting to the ball player.

We were reminded of that last summer when with perfect unawareness as to the implications the story would carry to a little house in a little town in Arkansas, we noted that Harry Kelley was being knocked out of the box regularly and was nearing the end of his big league tether. From the Arkansas town a letter bounced back from the player's wife, and we were proberly shamed. We hadn't meant to tell Mrs. Kelley that her husband, the family's bread winner, was sliding out of the big leagues.. We wouldn't have mentioned it if we were thinking of Mrs. Kelley, which, of course we were not.

At best, it's a strained sort of relationship between the baseball writer and the ball player. If the scribe wants to be factual he must properly note all the shortcomings and the frailties and often the dumb-club goings on, and, not forgetting he is on the same trains and in the same hotels with the athletes, he can come to be regarded as a Judas in their midst.

With the Detroit club there is one correspondent who has not visited the Tigers' dressing room or the bench in ten years. He's willing to forego the supposed tid-bit items gleamed there to preserve his complete independence of the athletes. Thus he is able to write with perfect detachment from the personal equations and it may be the best arrangement. At least he escapes the dirty looks and apparently at no cost to faithful reporting of the goings-on on the club.

The writer who has an unkind word for the usual ball player is resented usually by the lot of 'em. When word of the scuffle between the Tigers and Bob Ruark reached the Washington locker room across the way the other day, a half dozen of the Nats jubilantly shook Newsom's hand and slapped him on the back. They were Ruark's supposed pals of the spring training days and they felt oh, so bad, about it all. The baseball writer who gets pally with a ball player is overestimating human nature.

The worst cross that the writers have to bear is the official scoring job, although the pay is nice enough.. Woe to the writer who fails to give a batter a hit on what might have been a questionable error. In a fair share of cases he has made an enemy of that ball player who squawks that hits are his bread and butter and that the official scorer has it in for him. The writer who ventures into a locker room after the game under those circumstances isn't only brave; he's foolish.

Cubs' Rookie Blanks Boston Bees, 2 to 0

Southpaw Verne Olson Only Allows Five Hits Before Ladies Day Crowd of 16,000; Bill Posedel Yields Six Hits

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 12.—Verne Olsen, rookie southpaw, set the Boston Bees down with five hits today to give the Chicago Cubs a 2-to-0 victory before a ladies' day crowd of 16,000.

Olsen's sinker ball baffled the invaders throughout, but his seven bases on balls keept Boston in the game. The yearling pitcher, however, was effective in the pinches, leaving 12 runners stranded on the bases. He also struck out seven batters.

Bill Posedel yielded only six hits to the Cubs, but Chicago bunched two of these for a run in the third inning. Stan Hack smacked a double and scored on Jim Gleeson's single. The other marker in the seventh was unearned. Bobby Mattick walked, went to second on Olsen's sacrifice, advanced to third on Al Glossop's error on Hack's grounder and scored in a double steal.

The Bees were unable to get a good cut at Olsen's low-ball pitching, hitting only three flies to the outfield, all to Rightfielder Bill Nicholson.

The victory was Olsen's fifth as against as many defeats. The Cubs with two wins in three games in this series play the Bees again Saturday in the finale.

Carrothers Scores Upset Over Kamrath

Bobby Riggs, Alice Marble Also Winners In Western Tennis

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, July 12.—Bobby Carrothers, of Coronado, Calif., seeded seventh, upset third-seeded Robert Kamrath, of Houston, Tex., today in quarter finals of men's singles in the Western tennis tournament.

Carrothers took the first set, 6—1, Kamrath rallied and captured the second set by his forcing net play, 6—3, but Carrothers kept Kamrath at the baseline in the final set and broke through the Texan's service three successive times to win easily, 6—2.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, seeded first, advanced to the semifinals over Ronald Lubin, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—2. He will meet Bill Talbert, of Cincinnati in the first semifinal match tomorrow afternoon.

Talbert, seeded No. 4, defeated Gardner Larned, of Chicago, in the quarter-finals, 7—5, 6—2.

Welby Van Horn, or Los Angeles, seeded second, needed three sets to drop John Shostrom, of Chicago, in another quarterfinal match, 2—6, 6—3, 6—1. He plays Carrothers in the semifinals.

Alice Marble of Beverly Hills, Calif., seeded first in the women's division, ran over Jane Wagner, of Cincinnati, today in the quarter-finals, 6—0, 6—3. Miss Wagner briefly prolonged the second set by winning two straight games but Miss Marble took the last four.

Second-rated Virginia Wolfenden, of Berkley, Calif., eliminated Miss Geraldine Leitner, of Toledo, Ohio, 6—3, 6—2.

Other women semifinalists will be Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., who outlasted Mary Hardwick, of England, 6—4, 9—11, 6—3, and Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, who won a hard quarter-final battle with Nina Brown, of England, 6—3, 4—6, 8—6.

Hugh Casey to Leave Hospital in Two Days

Johnstown, Pa., July 12 (AP).—Hugh Casey, Brooklyn Dodger pitcher who suffered a mild brain concussion when he was beaned in an exhibition game Wednesday night, will be released from a hospital tomorrow or Sunday, his physician said today.

Casey will rejoin the Dodgers in Pittsburgh but probably will not be able to play for a week or more, the physician added.

Ritzenberg, Mrs. Herbert Defend Public Parks Titles Today

Largest Entry In 3 Years To Compete

69 Men Players Seek Net Honors At Reservoir; 11 Seek Women's

The annual Public Parks tennis championships for men and women will start today on the courts at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest. Sixty-nine men players, the largest entry in three years, will seek to dethrone Allie Ritzenberg, while Willie O'Steen Herbert will defend her women's title against 11 contenders. Because of the large field, winners of first round men's matches will play again.

Charlotte Decker is the only seeded woman besides Mrs. Herbert. Following Allie Ritzenberg on the men's seeded list are, in order, Ray Stocklinski, Billy Contreras, Art Simmons, Hy Ritzenberg (brother of the defending champion), George Herbert, Hugh Trigg and David Kay.

Entries for the men's and women's and mixed doubles will close today, at 12:30 at The Tennis Shop, and at 4:30 at the Rock Creek courts. Doubles play will start this afternoon.

Hymie's 'Fix' Turns Table On His Boss

Gets 'Fifth Columnist' To Spy and Winds Up With Triple-Cross

Jack Cuddy.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Grossinger Lake, N. Y., June 12.—In keeping with the unexpectedly wacky campaign to build up the battle of champions between Lew Jenkins and Henry Armstrong Wednesday night, howling Hymie Caplin, Jenkins' pilot, gave off two more goofy pronouncements today.

Blond Hymie, hand-waving master of double-talk, threatened to barge right over to the Armstrong camp at Greenwood Lake and find out definitely what has happened to his "fifth columnist," who is one of Armstrong's sparring partners.

"I got this fifth columnist on my pay roll to double-cross Eddie Mead (Armstrong's manager)," Hymie explained. "An' he's been reportin' faithful-like every day until yesterday. He's been tellin' me what mistakes Armstrong makes and how bad his condition is. Now he don't report, and I loin from anudder source that my fifth columnist is wearing one of Armstrong's shirts aroun'. Which makes it look as if my own double-crosser is tryin' to give me the triple-cross. There ain't no honesty in this business. You can't trust nobuddy."

Wants No Resin

The brigade of newspapermen—here at Jenkins' camp—prevailed upon bellowing Hymie to refrain from making a forced march to the Armstrong camp. Whereupon the hectic herring mangler from Brooklyn went off on another tangent and announced that he would request the boxing commission to eliminate the use of resin in the ring Wednesday night.

"We don't want no resin on the floor becuz that gives Armstrong an unfair advantage," Caplin gushed. "The handlers sprinkle res'n on the canvas to keep the fighters' feet from slippin'. But when Jenkins knocks Armstrong down, if there's resin on the floor, the referee has to wipe off Armstrong's gloves when he gets up. This gives Armstrong a rest of about 4 seconds and makes Jenkins take longer to finish him. Look how long Billy Cavanaugh took to wipe off Lou Ambers' gloves, making Jenkins work twicet as long to belt him out. I'll ask the commission to let Armstrong and Lew rub resin on the shoes. Then it won't have to be sprinkled on the canvas and the referee won't have to wipe off the gloves."

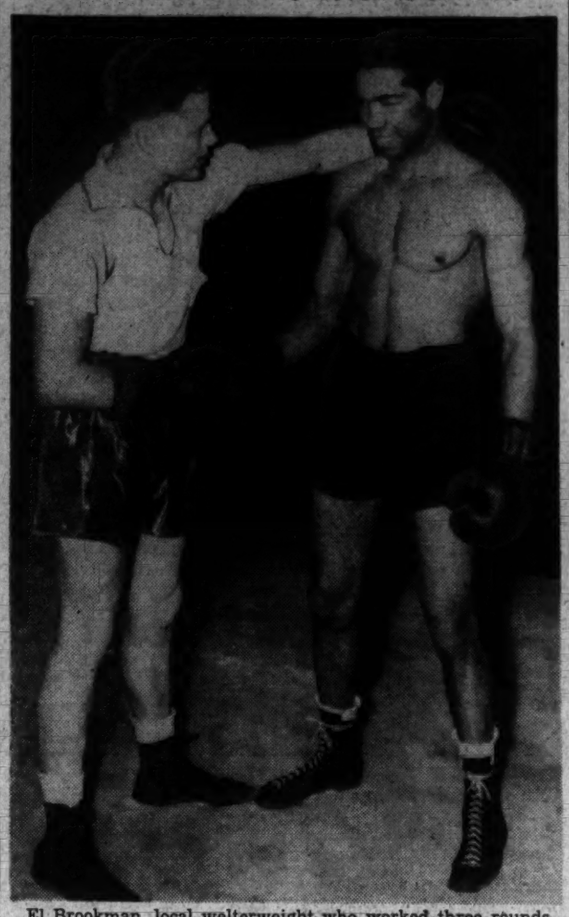
On Par With Mead

There's about as much chance of the commission eliminating the resin and glove-wiping as there is of Hymie becoming governor of Texas, Jenkins' home State.

Caplin's pronouncements today are on a par with Manager Mead's recent screwball statements about Armstrong's phoney weights—about Armstrong being unable to pare down to 140 pounds, when he was already scaling 138½.

The boxing fraternity is baffled at seeing Mead and Caplin conduct themselves like zanies before this particular battle, which shapes up as the best fight of the year and needs no screwball antics.

Cocoa Kid Pauses After Workout



El Brookman, local welterweight who worked three rounds with the Cocoa Kid, Puerto Rican colored fighter, yesterday at Turner's Arena, seems to be telling the Kid he looks in good shape for the bout with Furr Monday night. Cocoa will complete drills today at the arena at 1 p. m.

Cocoa Kid Holds Public Fight Drills

Works Three Brisk Rounds With Local Welter, Brookman

Louis (Kid) Cocoa, Puerto Rican colored fighter, who has been called by many boxing experts as another Joe Gans, yesterday swung into the final stages of his training campaign for Phil Furr, of Washington, his opponent in an important ten-round match Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

Known as the Cocoa Kid, ranked as the No. 1 welterweight challenger of the world, only a step behind the great champion, Henry Armstrong, the New Haven colored battler yesterday went through eight rounds of vigorous training at Turner's Arena. He will complete his drills today at 1 p. m., with the public invited.

Works Three Rounds

Several hundred fans sat through the Arena workout and watched the Keed box three rounds with El Brookman, Washington welterweight. In the second round Brookman got a little rough and Cocoa didn't like it. In the third Brookman got Cocoa's dander up with his fierce punching, and the Keed, as he later explained, lost his temper and cut loose with a flurry of terrific rights and lefts. One of these rights caught Brookman flush on the chin and knocked him head over heels to the canvas. Matchmaker Menendez, fearing Brookman was badly hurt, jumped into the ring. Billy Edwards, aiding in handling Cocoa, followed quickly.

"Take it easy," Menendez told Cocoa. "This isn't a regular boxing match—you're only sparring."

Cocoa Hard Puncher

Later Brookman said Cocoa was a terrific puncher, but that he thought Furr would give him plenty of trouble. Brookman lost a close decision to Furr last winter at the Arena, and yesterday had a chance to gauge the relative punching power of Cocoa as against Furr's.

Asked about his close fight with Jimmy Leto in Baltimore last Monday, Cocoa said he was trying to pace himself, knowing the Furr bout was coming up.

Cocoa explained that when Leto beat him twice before he was under a different management, and was a careless fighter. He said when George Shepherd took him over, and Georgie Sachs started training him in New Haven, he took a new lease on life. And asked that he meet Leto a third time.

Mrs. W. Martin Wins Cup Play At Washington

Takes 72-Hole Medal Muncaster Tourney With a Net 152

Mrs. Wilda Martin yesterday added an 89 to her first round score of 87 and deducted a 24-stroke handicap for a 152 to win the two-day, 72-hole medal play tournament for the Muncaster Cup at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. Martin also had the best gross score, but she chose to accept the net prize, low gross going to Mrs. Harold Smith, who had 94—89 for 193. Defending Champion Mrs. Lafayette Franklin was second low net with 93, 89—38 for 153.

A tie for third low net resulted between Mrs. D. P. Wolhaupter and Mrs. E. L. Duffies, with totals of 153. Mrs. Duffies won the draw, so Mrs. Wolhaupter took fourth place.

Low net in Class B was taken by Mrs. Lloyd Dennis, with 157. Following her were Mrs. H. E. Buskin, 167; Mrs. Otto Thacker, 170, and Mrs. J. R. Hogan, 172.

Mrs. C. J. Wilkinson and Mrs. B. A. Welte, with 87, 17—70, yesterday won low net in a two-ball, best-ball ladies' golf tournament at Congressional Country Club. Second were Mrs. E. H. Henderson and Mrs. G. E. Buskie, with 93, 22—71, while Mrs. A. G. Awalt and Mrs. H. Weber, with 91, 18—73, were third.

Isabel Harvey, Helen Harrison Tennis Victors

All but One Match in D. C. Meet Halted by Rain; Play Today

Rains yesterday forced postponement until today of all but one match scheduled in the District of Columbia Women's and Girls' tennis tournament at Columbia Country Club.

In the only match played, Isabel Harvey and Helen Harrison, of Baltimore defeated Margot Parsons and Julie Fisk, 6—3, 4—6, 7—5, to gain the girls' doubles semifinals.

Finals of the women's singles tournament is scheduled at 3 o'clock this afternoon between unseeded Anne Harrison, of Baltimore, and fourth-ranked Charlotte Decker, of Washington. The championship match of the girls' section is scheduled at 10:30 a. m. between unseeded Lucia Lhamon, of Annapolis, and top-ranked Isabel Harvey, of Baltimore.

Survivors in the girls' doubles are due a strenuous test today, with semifinals scheduled at 12 noon and finals about two hours later.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer, Noted Turfman, Dies

Owner of Sun Beau And Exterminator, Passes Away at 71

Binghamton, N. Y., July 12 (AP).—Willis Sharpe Kilmer, 71, publisher of the Binghamton Press and owner of three of the greatest horses on the American turf—Exterminator, Sun Briar and Sun Beau—died tonight.

A well-known manufacturer of medicinal supplies in addition to his publishing, horse racing and thoroughbred breeding interests, Kilmer succumbed to pneumonia at his summer home at nearby Sky Lake after being in ill health for the past year.

His wife, the former Sarah Jane Wells, whom he married in Paris, was with him when he died.

Loved Horses and Sports

Born in Brooklyn, October 18, 1968, Kilmer came to Binghamton with his parents while still a boy. After attending Cornell University he entered into business with his father in the manufacture of medicinal goods.

An early lover of dogs, horses and a tennis and golf enthusiast, he turned soon to the racing of thoroughbred horses, and, in 1918, his beloved Exterminator, which went on to earn the nickname of "Ole Bones," won the Kentucky Derby.

The horse, one of the most beloved of any on the American turf with the possible exception of Man o' War, was followed in the Kilmer string by Sun Briar, which became one of the Nation's leading stud horses.

Raised Famous Horses

Standing in Court Manor stud at New Market, Va., Sun Briar has sent such offspring to the races as Pompey, Sun Edwin, Fierthorn and the famed Sun Beau, winner of $376,774. Sun Beau held the American record for money won until Seabiscuit came along to surpass it.

In 1904, Kilmer founded the Binghamton Press, housing the paper in the city's first sky scraper as a memorial to his father. He later established the Kilmer Pathological Laboratory in Binghamton and pioneered in forest and game preservation work both in New York and New England.

In 1939 the sportsman was awarded a plaque by the New York Turf Writers Association as the person who did the most for the advancement of breeding of thoroughbred horses during that year.

Bordagaray Sets Hitting Record

Indianapolis, July 12 (AP).—Stanley (Frenchy) Bordagaray, Kansas City rightfielder, broke the American Association record for consecutive hits tonight as the league-leading Blues clubbed Indianapolis' last-place Indians, 6 to 1.

Bordagaray got his twelfth and thirteenth successive safeties, both singles to right centerfield, after being hit by Pitcher Earl Caldwell his first time at bat. He was fanned by Relief Pitcher John Wilson on his next appearance, but beat out a bunt his last time up.

Miss Tainter Wins Western Junior Title

Eileen Quinlan Loses Finals, 5 and 4; Short Game Weakness Tells

South Bend, Ind., July 12 (AP).—Dark-haired Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak., turned back dark-horse Eileen Quinlan, of St. Paul, today to capture the junior title of the Women's Western Golf Association. The match, played over the South Bend Country Club course, ended in a 5 and 4 decision.

Miss Tainter, runner-up last year and pretournament favorite, had her opponent three down at the turn and clinched the crown on the fourteenth green with a 4-foot putt which halved the hole.

The new champion went three over womens' par of 39 on the initial nine, gaining her three-up edge by understroking Miss Quinlan on the first, fifth, seventh and ninth hole. Miss Tainter took the eleventh and thirteenth holes on the in nine.

Cameo Beats Brewers, 8-4, and Takes Lead

Furnituremen's Victory Breaks Three-Way Tie in Post's Industrial League; Errors Figure in Important Scoring

Cameo Furniture broke a three-way deadlick and took undisputed possession of first place in the second-half race in The Washington Post Industrial League yesterday by defeating Heurich Brewers, 8-4, on the Ellipse.

The victory over Heurich, winner of the first-half title, put the Furnituremen a half game ahead of O'Donnel's, the third team involved in the three-way tie.

A five-run rally in the third inning in which errors directly figured in the scoring of three runs accounted for Cameo's winning margin. With one out, "Woody" Godfrey started the spurt with a single. "Booty" McQuinn singled, Schwab reached first on an error by the Heurich third baseman, Gadfrey scoring. Harris also gained first on a second error by the third sacker, with Ken McQuinn crossing the plate. McQuinn got to first on an error by Posnack, Schwab going home. Jacobchiak doubled to score Harris, and K. McQuinn then tallied the fifth run of the inning on a fielder's choice by Adair. The throw to the plate was slow.

I.B.M., Powers Tens Capture Softball Games

Dixie Tavern Bows, 3-1; Cameo Lose At Ballston Park, 4-3

International Business Machine defeated Dixie Tavern, 3-1, and Powers Builders beat Cameo Furniture, 4-3, at Ballston Park last night to become the first two semifinalists in the annual Middle Atlantic softball tournament.

I. B. M., in winning behind the two-hit, 12-strikeout pitching of Smith himself, maintained its record of not having lost this season to a local foe at Ballston. Batting leaders for the winners were Shortstop Weigel and Centerfielder Wheeler who smacked two hits each.

A three-hit hurling performance by Gross enabled Powers Builders to nose out Cameo, which early in the tournament upset the defending champion Senate Beer team.

The other two semifinalists will be determined Monday night when Trenton Democrats, of Baltimore, meet Standard Linen, of Arlington County, and Tru-Blu engages the Oklahoma Cowboys of Enid, Oklahoma.

On the Line . . . With Considine

New York, July 12.—Even more astounding than the fact that New York will derive about $6,000,000 in taxes from horse racing this year is the fact that the $6,000,000 will come from only a meager portion of the horse-betting now going on in the Empire State:—the meager honest portion.

CONSIDINE

Horse-betting in New York, though given the benediction of the populace, the Governor and the Legislature, is still largely illegal. The $6,000,000 which the State will get from its 5 per cent cut of the parimutuel play, plus 50 per cent of that blizzard of odd pennies known as "breakage," represents only a timid fraction of the sum which could be derived if the State would adopt two suggestions by Herbert Bayard Swope. And enforce them after adoption.

Swope, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission, and a spade-caller of distinction, favors legalized off-the-course betting kiosks, and a limited number of legalized bookmakers at the New York tracks.

The real overlords of New York racing are not Swope and his fellow commissioners. They are a few thugs who have cornered the pool hall, cigar store, office washroom, factory bench brand of betting. They make such bettors pay them a bonus in advance before they'll guarantee to give them back as much as their winning horse earns.

They arbitrarily set 20-to-1 as the top pay off on normal bets, no matter how much the horse pays at the track. They work through thousands of petty runners, who get a small percentage of all losing bets they book.

These rascals handle money in ransom-sized bundles. A responsible survey taken recently showed that there are in the neighborhood of 250,000 New Yorkers who bet this way every day, away from the track. They want no sympathy, of course. But they get no real protection on their hard-won investment, and no portion of their contributions toward the improvement of the breed ever gets to a State treasury.

The people of New York voted out the bookies, but about 20 of the old-timers have been operating flagrantly at the local horse yards since the season opened. One of the commissioners estimates that about $400,000 a day goes through the hands of these bookies, and that's almost as much as gets into the machines—where the State can take a whack at it with a view to lightening the tax load.

Like Don Ameche losing the girl in the end, horse-betting is inevitable. It is such a part of so many persons' daily lives that a regular open air betting ring operates each noon at Thirty-eighth and Seventh avenue, for the suit and cloak trade. A legalized betting booth there—in the English and French manner—would pay proper odds, and the State would get the excess instead of those no-tax paying muggs.

As for the bookies at the race tracks, under Swope's plan they would pay a heavy fee to operate, and perhaps a portion of their handle would be taken by the State. And bootleg books would be much more severely dealt with than is now the case.

The Swope plan, we believe, would bring conservatively $25,000,000 a year to the State. If there must be horse-betting, and there apparently must, we're fools to let its richest rewards go to a series of criminals or conscienceless bookmakers. And if New York ever took the lead in establishing downtown betting offices it would only be a matter of months, we think, before the 17 other States which have gone into the racing business follow suit.

Schley Goree Disqualified; West Sea Wins at Hagerstown

Two Jockeys Suspended For Bad Rides

Rough Riding Brings About Action; Victor Pays Backers $4.60; Keswick Hill Places

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 12.—Rough riding that led to a disqualification of the winner of the day's feature race and the suspension of a pair of jockeys marked today's program at Hagerstown. Schley Goree, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr., finished in front in the Hotel Hamilton Purse but the stewards saw fit to rule him out of the money. With Schley Goree eliminated, Mrs. Cy Butler's West Sea was declared the winner, much to the delight of the favorite players, while Keswick Hill moved into second money and Two Aces took the show position.

Jockey A. Vessell, second leading rider during the Charles Town session, was set down for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding aboard Schley Goree, while Jockey Woodrow Kirk drew four days for tending to a little bit more than his own knitting in the third race astrice Ann Groucher.

Vesseli and Schley Goree seemed out on the track for the purpose of interfering with West Sea. The Ed Crump gelding, from his No. 7 post position, came over across the field in the run to the first turn. At this point, Schley Goree bumped High Aim into West Sea, then running on the rail.

Schley Goree then toook a lead, and the second time around Jockey A. F. Martinez, who claimed the foul, sent West Sea to the inside of the leader. Schley Goree was weaving at this stage and West Sea was shut off sharply. Martinez was forced to take up and sent his mount to the outside. Entering the stretch it appeared that West Sea might overcome all obstacles and still win, but the game son of Westwick weakened suddenly and lost by a length and a half. Keswick Hill and Two Aces put on mild stretch drives that sent them into the money.

West Sea was a heavily played choice at a $4.60 mutuel and was clocked in 1:50 1-5 over a heavy track. Schley Goree would have paid $12.70 had his victory been made official.

Kirk's suspension was the result of a scramble going to the first turn in which his mount pr,obably suffered the most. The boy took the mount after his brother, Carson, had originally had the assignment.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUE LINE, $6.20, $4.30, $3.70; ASUNDER, $6.30, $5.10; MISS SOOT, $4.60.
TRUE LINE saved ground to take command entering backstretch, was shaken up approaching stretch and was drawing out at end. ASUNDER took lead going to first turn, bore out to lose command and could not stay with winner while kept to pressure to end. MISS SOOT could not keep up early, went to contention after 3 furlongs and hung thereafter. SUSIE'S MARK had some early speed and weakened.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400. For maiden 3 and 4-year-olds. Start good from gate for all but Questre. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:04. Winner, H. Plest's br. g. (3), by Pertinax—Alticope. Trained by W. G. Whitney. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:27⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SINGLE PLY, $11.60, $5.60, $4.50; QUESTRE, $4.60, $4.20; BIRTHDAY MISS, $7.60.
SINGLE PLY, steadied along while close up, responded when placed to drive on outside and wore down QUESTRE to win going away. QUESTRE, unprepared for start and off last, was hustled up on inside, took command with good energy, saved ground, but was tiring in stretch run. BIRTHDAY MISS was keen forward factor from beginning and held on gamely. ACE CHANCE went evenly.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:31½. Winner, Mrs. L. Crowell's ch. m. (5), by Happy Time—Green Stripe. Trained by W. J. Hughes. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:26.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREEN WATER, $6.30, $3.70, $3.20; SNOBBISH LADY, $5.90, $4.50; MORE POISE, $6.20.
GREEN WATER, rated while closest to pace of SNOBBISH LADY, responded willingly when placed to drive, assumed command and drew out to win with speed in reserve. MORE POISE, slow to begin, closed gamely. CAFFEINE could not threaten while attempting to run out.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. The Hotel Hamilton. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00⅛. Off 4:02. Winner, Mrs. C. Butler's br. g. (5), by Westwick—Deep Sea. Trained by C. Butler. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:50⅘.

†Disqualified.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEST SEA, $4.60, $3.70, $3.70; KESWICK HILL, $6.30, $4.70; TWO ACES, $7.30.
SCHLEY GOREE cut across sharply on way to first turn, knocked HIGH AIM into WEST SEA, shut off WEST SEA after 6 furlongs and drew out in stretch run. Martinez's foul claim against winner was allowed. WEST SEA rallied after being impeded at first turn, was blocked while attempting to go through on inside and tired gradually thereafter. KESWICK HILL rallied gamely when shaken up and closed willingly. TWO ACES came wide for racing room and closed resolutely.

FIFTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:37. Off 4:40. Winner, J. K. Wynkoop's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN KEY, $5.50, $3.70, $3.40; PAPER GIRL, $13.30, $9.80; DIXIE S, $10.10.
GOLDEN KEY, off in first flight, drove to inside of PAPER GIRL to take command, withstood challenges of latter and held on gamely. PAPER GIRL was rushed to front, forced pace and closed under punishment. DIXIE S was sent to contention after quarter and withstood long drive gamely. MAN AT ARMS could not keep up.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:11. Off 5:13. Winner, John Pons' ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYBALK, $95.30, $28.50, $11.40; GROUCHY, $12.50, $6.50; MOLASSES JULIA, $4.10.
FLYBALK, allowed to settle into best stride, saved ground to improve position, came out approaching stretch and wore down GROUCHY to win going away under drive. GPOUCHY saved ground to get to front, set good pace, but could not resist winner. MOLASSES JULIA moved up menacingly after a half, but weakened gradually thereafter. SCHLEY AL was carried out by FAIR HAIRED at first turn, was blocked while attempting to come through on inside and tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:46. Off 5:46½. Winner, A. P. Pannell's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT STAR, $16.10, $8.40, $7.10; LAKE SHORE, $9.70, $6.70; REGAL FROLIC, $7.70.
BRIGHT STAR, close up from start, responded gamely when put to hard drive, wore down REGAL FROLIC to get to front and was kept to pressure to end. LAKE SHORE saved ground while improving position and closed with good energy. REGAL FROLIC was sent to front under hustling tactics and was tiring at end. TEPIN was hard ridden to keep up early and stopped.

Supreme Speed Pays Off $11.60 At Suffolk Downs

Boston, July 12 (AP).—Supreme Speed, from the stable of G. R. Watkins, galloped through mud and slop to an easy four-length victory today in the 6-furlong feature at Suffolk Downs.

Under a well-judged ride by veteran Eddie Smith, Supreme Speed stayed off the early pace and then came on at the head of the stretch to take a long lead that was never threatened. Mrs. L. Palladino's Remarkable, in the contention from the start, lasted to take the place award by a nose from Mrs. Harold Simmons' Floragina. W. W. Adams' Listaro was last in the four-horse field.

Supreme Speed covered the three-quarters in 1:13 and paid $11.60 to win and $4.80 to place. Remarkable returned $4 for place.

Tennis Rained Out

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Time Her, winner of the Thursday feature, is still stabled at Charles Town and was vanned over for the event. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has arranged a good card for today, topped by the Antietam Handicap and it promises to be a battle worthy of the name. In addition, the third event for 2-year-olds includes Pete Junior, owned by M. R. Waugh and a stake performer this year. Several of the local riders took yesterday off. Mike Sarno, Buddy Root, Sammy Palumbo and Martin Bletzacker were absentees. Jockeys R. Bernhardt and R. Thomas were given licenses today. Bernhardt arrived to pilot Salburne only to have the favorite bleed in the running and finish last. It was a blow to the customers who wagered on Salburne, as if the race had already been run. Frank Bassnett, of Wheeling, is a member of the local official racing family. I wonder how "Jockey Le Blanc's brother" is getting along with his touting. Willie Daly tells me that Arthur Hullcoat has shipped five horses from Charles Town to Bel Air for F. H. McDonald to train. When Jockey A. F. Martinez claimed a foul against Vesselli yesterday it marked the first time that the "objection" sign had been flashed to fans at this track. There used to be a card with the word "foul" on it. Among yesterday's fans were Dr. Gordon Lewis, of the Cumberland Valley Field Trial Association; Les Young, athletic director of Front Royal High; Beany Carl, superintendent of the Penal Farm in this county and Omar Kremcaw, Silver Spring contractor. Books for the Cumberland meeting have gone to the printers. Poker Dice rolled a pair of snake eyes. Rouge Catalan is being rested until Bel Air. Final check showed Sammy Palumbo rode 45 winners at the 48-day Charles Town meeting. He didn't miss his goal of a winner a day after all. He was out of the saddle three days. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—If Westing stays in at the turns I believe it will be all over except the pay off. Gets in with feather weight. John Werring has speed and belongs with this kind. Timetia knows the way around the track and should be in the thick of contention.

Second race—Lulu Khayyam has speed to get to the front of these and will have to be caught. I believe she will stick it out long enough to collect the brackets. Ravenhurst has been quitting in recent tests but is dangerous. Repeat showed enough at Charles Town to warrant respect.

Third Race—Pete Jr. dopes the best of this field and appears capable of taking the purse. Just how he will like the track, I do not know but I'm forced to string along. On The Beam should have won first out here. Mayfern has been consistent enough to cause trouble.

Fourth race—Sure Touch was bumped repeatedly during the opening furlong of that last. Needs only better racing luck to take this event. Vanelder has that fine Charles Town form as a recommendation. Gay Frank may get to the top early and is a threat.

Fifth race—Duchess Del probably will take command early in this event. I believe she has the speed to stay there. Sky Hostess won that last in impressive fashion and should be in the thick of contention. Brilliant One would appreciate an off track.

Sixth race—Clymene, from the Bennings Stable, goes back into action after a rest. She is fit as hands can make horses and I might be biting off more than she can chew, but I'll take my chances. Bright Gem was a winner at Delaware Park. Trostar is a tough nut right now.

Seventh race—Pencader likes the route and the track and appears to be nicely placed. I see no reason for mistakes. Lapis showed me enough to warrant attention. The Swagman for the show end.

Best bet—Pencader.

6 Stores Here Report Sales Gain of 5.2%

Reserve Survey Shows June Volume Slightly Under 6-Month Average

Six Washington department stores reported sales in June were 5.2 per cent larger than sales in June, 1939, according to the monthly report of the Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond.

In cumulative sales for the calendar year through June, local department store sales gained 5.3 cent over the same 1939 period.

For the Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole, 56 department stores reported June sales exceeded the like month last year by 6.7 per cent. For the first six months the district sales were 6.3 per cent better than last year.

	June, 1940	January-June, 1940
Baltimore (8)	+10.0	+ 6.9
Charleston, S. C. (3)	+16.0	+13.9
Charleston, W. Va. (3)	+11.3	+12.0
Huntington, W. Va. (3)	— 3.3	+ 3.5
Lynchburg, Va. (3)	— 2.9	+ 6.6
Norfolk, Va. (3)	+ 6.4	+ 5.8
Richmond, Va. (3)	+ 4.5	+ 4.9
Winston-Salem, N. C. (3)	+11.3	+ 8.3
Other cities (21)	+ 6.1	+ 9.2
Fifth District (56)	+ 6.7	+ 6.3

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board at Washington estimated yesterday that department store sales in the week ended July 6, were 7 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year.

Sales in the week ended June 29 had been 5 per cent above last year, and in the four weeks ended July 6, they averaged 8 per cent more than in the similar 1939 period.

By Federal Reserve districts, increases in the one week ended July 6, over a year ago were:

Boston, 6 per cent; Philadelphia, 19; Cleveland, 11; Richmond, 15; Atlanta, 7; Chicago, 9; St. Louis, 4; Minneapolis, 10; Kansas City, 5; Dallas, 6 and San Francisco, 4.

A 1 per cent decrease in the New York district was the only decline on the list.

Twenty-fifth Anniversary Fete

In recognition of 25 years representation in Washington of the Home Insurance Co. of New York, the George W. Linkins Co. members were given a dinner Thursday night at the Carlton Hotel.

Greetings were conveyed from Harold V. Smith, president of Home Insurance Co., and from George E. Allen, a former D. C. commissioner and now a vice president of the company.

The following were present representing the Washington office of the insurance company: John F. Walker, special agent; Richard C. Marshall, manager of the Home Indemnity Company, an affiliate; Barry B. Townsend, special agent, and Misses Betty Gibbon, Louise Demarest and Hilda White.

Correction

Based on latest census and deposit figures, there is enough money on deposit in Washington banks to give every man, woman and child living in the city $580.07. In yesterday's story, The Post stated that the per capita average would be approximately $462.72. The latter figure would be correct for 1938, when deposits totaled $306,663,153.

The $580.07 per capita figure is arrived at by dividing the latest census total of 663,153 into $384,676,505, the correct deposit figure as of June 29, 1940.

1920..$162,747,575 1938..$306,858,345
1930.. 262,052,926 1939.. 323,681,232
1933.. 212,904,324 1940.. 384,676,505

City Bank Admitted

Hugh Leach, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, announced yesterday that the City Bank of Washington had been admitted to membership in the Fifth District of the Federal Reserve System.

Quarterly Net Of Underwood Rises $183,900

66c a Share Earned Compared With 41c In 1939 Period

New York, July 12.—Underwood Elliott Fisher Co., makers of office equipment, reported consolidated net profit for the June 30 quarter of $484,656, equal to 66 cents a common share, compared with $300,756, or 41 cents a share, in the comparable 1939 quarter. In the preceding quarter, net was $588,728, or 80 cents a share.

Lehigh Portland Cement Co. reported net profit for the 12 months ended June 30 of $2,161,213, equal to $2.58 a common share, compared with $1,606,937, or $1.83 on common, in the preceding year. Plants are in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Virginia, Alabama, Maryland and Washington.

North American Rayon Corporation earned in the 12 weeks ended June 15 net profit of $512,168, equal to 93 cents a share on combined Class "A" and "B" common stocks, compared with $292,002, or 50 cents on the combined shares, in the comparable 1939 period. Factories are in Elizabethton, Tenn.

Bliss & Laughlin, Inc., today reported a net profit, subject to audit and year-end adjustments, for the six months ended June 30, of $339,485, as compared to $244,233 for the same period a year ago.

These earnings were after preferred dividends and were equivalent to $1.29 a share on 262,554 shares of common stock outstanding June 30, compared with 93 cents a common share the corresponding 1939 period on the basis of present capitalization.

Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation reported today a consolidated net profit of $1,974,719, equal to $1.45 per share on common stock after preferred dividends, for the first six months of 1940. Second quarter net earnings were $1,008,121, equivalent to 75.7 cents a share on common stock after payments on preferred stock.

Home Contracts Lead 13% Upturn In June Building

New York, July 12 (AP).—Construction contracts awarded in 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains in June totaled $324,726,000, a gain of 13 per cent over the figure for June, 1939, the F. W. Dodge Corporation, reported today.

Residential contracts, leading the upswing in private building, totaled $135,274,000, against $111,896,000 in June last year.

"The high level of building activity recorded for June should dispel all remaining fear that the industry will, at an early date, suffer adversely from the economic displacements caused by the war," said Thomas S. Holden, vice president in charge of research.

Offsetting decline in certain types of Government building, he said, probably would be private plant expansion for the defense program and Government construction to house military forces and for defense bases.

Ship Insurance Rate To Britain Raised

New York, July 12 (AP).—War risk insurance on shipments to the United Kingdom have been advanced from 7½ to 10 per cent of cargo value, the highest rate since outbreak of the war, it was announced today.

Action of local underwriters followed a similar move in London yesterday when rates were hiked a corresponding amount on all shipments from the United Kingdom to North, Central and South American destinations.

Export Traffic Of Rails Jumps 64% In June

No Congestion Reported In Atlantic and Gulf Port Movements

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads said today that export traffic through Atlantic and Gulf ports in June was 64 per cent greater than in June, 1939.

"This traffic is being moved without congestion and with no delay except on traffic arriving at the ports for countries isolated by reason of the war," the association said. "The situation is adjusting itself rapidly and the amount of traffic, most of which has been placed in railroad storage facilities to release equipment, is being reduced daily. The continuation of the ports in liquid condition is due largely to the continued cooperation of steamship lines, port authorities, exporters and shippers."

Trammell Named N. B. C. President; Succeeds Lohr

New York, July 12 (AP).—Election of radio veteran Niles Trammell, 46, formerly of Chicago, as the third president of the National Broadcasting Co. was effected by the board of directors today. He succeeds Maj. Lenox R. Lowr, resigned to become president of the Chicago Museum of Science and Industry.

TRAMMELL

Trammell's elevation from executive vice president had been forecast almost since the announcement on June 7 of Lohr's resignation. Lohr, who had been president since 1936, returns to the city where he ran the Century of Progress exposition in 1933 and 1934.

In taking over the post first held from 1926 to 1936 by M. H. Aylesworth, Trammell climaxed a radio career dating to 1923. He first joined the sales department of the Radio Corporation of America, transferring to N. B. C. in March, 1928. Three months later he was named manager of the central division, Chicago. The next year he became a vice president, serving in that city until January, 1939, when he was promoted to executive vice president at New York.

State Turns Down Split Bond Bid

Annapolis, Md., July 12 (AP).—A split bid on $1,173,000 in State bonds was turned down by the State board of public works today as a matter of policy although a benefit to the State of some $1,212 was involved.

Instead, the board sold the 1½ per cent issue to the First National Bank of Baltimore and associates on a uniform bid of 101.49—which will give Maryland use of the money at an interest rate of approximately 1.33 per cent.

The First National Bank of New York, R. W. Presprich & Co., New York, and the Mercantile-Commerce & Trust Co., of St. Louis, were associated with the First National of Baltimore in the bid.

Aluminum Pay Boost Averts Strike Threat

Pittsburgh, July 12 (AP).—The Aluminum Co. of America agreed to grant a wage increase of 2 cents an hour to its hourly rated employes in an agreement reached tonight with the C. I. O. Aluminum Workers Union, ending a protracted controversy in which a strike had been threatened.

The agreement represented a compromise of union demands for a general increase of 10 cents an hour. The new rate establishes a minimum of 65 cents an hour, the same as in the glass industry but 2½ cents higher than that of steel. The new rate goes into effect July 14.

Lehman Syndicate Gets Cleveland Issue

New York, July 12.—A banking group headed by Lehman Brothers was awarded an issue of $4,000,000 City of Cleveland, Ohio, refunding bonds on its bid of par plus a $1,200 premium for $3,421,000 as 2's and $579,000 as 2¼'s. The successful bid represented a net interest cost of the city of 2.1058 per cent.

ICC Asks $148,680,283 Cut In Capital of Frisco Railway

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission issued yesterday a plan of reorganization for the St. Louis San Francisco Railway calling for sharp reduction in capitalization and fixed interest charges and the elimination of present stockholders.

The plan provides a capitalization of $240,000,000, compared with the old capitalization of $388,680,293.

It would reduce fixed interest charges from $12,613,106 to $3,000,117 annually.

The commission said the equities of the holders of both the common and preferred stock of the Frisco "are found to have no value," and made no provision for their participation in the reorganized company.

Of the total capitalization of $240,000,004, $75,685,319 would be fixed interest.

The plan provides that the equipment obligations of the Frisco remains undisturbed.

New 30-year 4 per cent divisional mortgage bonds would be distributed in exchange, at par, to holders of the two issues of Kansas City, Memphis & Birmingham Railroad Co. bonds.

The claims of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Railroad Credit Corporation are recognized by the allotment of first mortgage bonds. Because of the lack of assets free of mortgage lien, the commission said general creditors could be given nothing for their claims.

Interested parties have 60 days in which to petition the ICC for modification of the plan. At the end of that time it will be sent to the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri, where the Frisco has been in reorganization for several years.

If approved by the court, the plan will be submitted to eligible security holders for their approval or rejection.

Economist's View

Totalitarian Living Standards Vastly Below American Levels

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

Americans who believe in the superiority of our free private enterprise system should be on guard against "band wagon" thinking.

With the growing acceptance of the Fascist pattern in Europe, thoughtless observers over here are raising the question of whether the American way can survive.

Lest we be confused in our policies by a defeatism incidental to the war trend, it is desirable to make an inventory of American moral and material resources.

At the outset, I want to express my own conviction that the American design for living can and will endure, and that it could be jeopardized only by inner lack of faith or by external attack.

In Europe, the Fascist pattern has been accepted mainly as a receivership technique for reorganizing defeated, disheartened and bankrupt nations.

Accordingly, if we want to assure continuance of the American system of economic, civil and religious liberties, then we should recognize the importance of balancing the national economy and promoting national solvency.

Thus, even if hobbles are placed on the economic system in the name of democracy and freedom, we should be realistic enough to recognize that such arbitrary restraints, if they cripple our system, might ultimately make us prey for autocratic patterns launched at the time of national bankruptcy.

The Fascist, or Nazi pattern can have no appeal to Americans on either the basis of economic results or human qualities.

And popular living standards in Germany, Italy, Russia, Spain and other totalitarian countries are vastly below the prevailing American level.

A peace-loving Nation, we have set an example throughout our history in getting along without a large permanent standing Army.

We have been careful not to divert too large a portion of our production to noneconomic military purposes.

The trend of events in Europe had caused us to modify our traditional policy in order to be ready for any eventualities.

It is to be hoped that through wise procedures we can provide much of the sinews of preparedness out of the hitherto unused excess capacity of industry and out of the surplus of labor. To the extent that total productivity of the Nation is thus raised, we may, in part at least, be spared the European experience of holding down civilian living standards through diverting production to military purposes.

After the war is over and the United States has demonstrated its capacity to excel in military preparedness, there may be occasion, instead of emulating European patterns, to call attention to the outside world to the policies which have made this Nation flourish. Maybe others will be stimulated to make achievements in the peaceful field of raising the material wellbeing of their people. Then maybe there can be multilateral arrangements for keeping down the high cost of war and preparations for war.

But with modern war leaning toward mechanization and air maneuvers, it should be recognized that in war as in peace economic organization is the determinant of success. Mass production is right up our alley, and in this field we need have no sense of inferiority. As William S. Knudsen, generalissimo of national defense, recently told me: "We Americans are cleverer with the pencil (than the Germans); we excel in design."

The American way alone offers a mechanism for political and religious liberty amidst industrial discipline provided by unfettered business management.

At its inception, the American system survived in the face of existing worldwide autocracies. In competition with patterns which grow out of national bankruptcy, it can flourish greatly in the post-war world, although under some circumstances we shall, of course, increasingly stress national self-containment rather than the will o' the wisp of an export bonanza.

The Market

Minor Price Changes, Listless Trade Continue; Activity Anticipated After Party Convention

New York, July 12.—The stock market today remained locked within the narrow range that has held it for the last week while traders peered into the future in the hope of seeing something that could be discounted. The composite average was virtually unchanged, showing a gain of 0.01 point, and the volume amounted to only 255,900 shares.

Politics and the war naturally claimed the attention of the street, with indices of business a poor third. A few of the more optimistic voiced the opinion that once the Democratic national convention is out of the way we may get some activity. The reasoning behind such a prediction leaves much to be desired, for the convention is certain to be a one-day story, possibly strung along for several days for effect.

It is a one-man affair from all standpoints and it is difficult to see how the official announcement of the platform and the candidate will exert any influence on the street. If the financial community is looking to politics for something to discount, it will probably have to wait until November.

Other Possible Effects

The war is a more potent influence although there was not any material change in the situation today sufficient to produce a wide swing in prices. Such benefit as the market obtained from the Administration's willingness to permit speedier depreciation of plants built to forward the defense program and to tax all companies alike under the excess profits provision rather than singling out the aviation and shipbuilding concerns for special limitations had only a oneday effect upon the list. The buoyancy of Thursday was missing.

The general tenor of statistical information was favorable. Employment in New York State factories for the first half of 1940 was reported to be at the highest for any similiar period since 1930. Moreover there was a contraseasonal advance in June over May.

Prices in Rut

Within the market, the price changes of virtually all of the leaders were fractional. Kennecott blossomed out to be the day's most active stock and lost a small fraction. Bethlehem edged up while United Steel was unchanged. Relatively few of the aviation issues were included in the list of 15 most active stocks and the price changes were insignificant.

A drop of 1½ points was sustained by Pullman following announcement that the Government will have the company into court to prove that it doesn't have a monopoly in the manufacture of its particular type of railroad equipment. Westinghouse was one of the few of the better known issues to gain as much as a point and trading in it was inactive. Oils held firm, apparently not being affected by the reduction in Pennsylvania crude prices.

Firmness in the steels has reflected the belief that the industry will extend its rise in operations to a new high for the year next week.

Old Dispute Settled

The decision of the stock exchange to enforce its old rule prohibiting its member firms from becoming specialists or trading as dealers in big board stocks on out-of-town exchanges was seen in the street as closing a controversy which has long worked unjustly against the local market.

Members may trade for customers in any market, and also may trade anywhere for their own account, but they will no longer be able to use the primary market of New York as a base for operations in other markets.

Bond Deals Dull

Listed bond trading failed to pick up today, although most issues were steady and a few managed to move into higher ground. Trading totaled $4,430,000, or slightly under the previous day. United States Treasury issues were dull, while distribution was being effected of the new 2¼ per cent issues. Dealers reported some switching from outstanding bonds into the new Treasury issue, which was traded in the counter market at 102 and slightly over.

Best rated corporate issues held to previous levels, as institutional buyers now are more concerned over new issues than outstanding bonds. Reaction developed in communications obligations, but local tractions gained some fractions, holding company and share privilege bonds were dull.

French bonds sold 5 to 15 points down, on the establishment of a Fascist state. German issues also were soft, but Hungarians improved owing to reports that territory eventually will be added to that country. The Italian group was firm, while Australian and Canadian bonds idled. Argentines were soft in the Latin-American group.

Auto Output, Sales Still at Brisk Pace

Detroit, July 12 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports in its weekly survey of the automobile industry says today that production this week will total 62,176 cars and trucks compared with 51,975 units in last week's holiday-curtailed output schedule. Assemblies this week a year ago numbered 63,910.

The survey said that sales continue in a contraseasonal trend, well above a year ago, and that in certain spots a car shortage might develop in a month or two.

Rate Increase Is Announced By Aetna Life

Endowment and Life Policies Sold After Sept. 1 Affected

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., July 12. — The Aetna Life Insurance Co. announced today it would increase its rates for life and endowment policies effective on contracts sold after September 1, explaining that the action was prompted by declining returns from investments.

The announcement stated that although higher premiums have been freely predicted in the industry for some time, the Aetna was believed to be the first company to take the step of calculating its nonparticipating premiums on a rate of interest of 3 per cent instead of the 3½ per cent reserve basis now in effect in practically all stock companies for many years.

The increased rates for life and endowment policies will be substantially offset, the company reported, under life policies by increases in cash values.

The change will not affect the company's term insurance or annuity, it was announced.

Week's Offerings Reach Ne wTop Since February

New York, July 12 (AP).—New securities offered to the public during the week ended yesterday totaled $124,043,497, the largest volume since the final week of February, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

Most of the week's total was accounted for by corporate financing programs to refund existing obligations at lower rates of interest. Except for the Jersey Central Power & Light issue a couple of weeks ago, it was the first important corporate financing since the middle small, however, only 11 per cent of of May.

The demand for new capital was the total representing new money.

Underwriting circles said that the issues were easily absorbed, indicating a strong demand for securities of investment caliber.

Industrial Gas Firms to Merge

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Directors of the National Cylinder Gas Co. and Compressed Industrial Gases, Inc., today voted a merger of the two organizations.

The merger agreement will be submitted August 27 to stockholders for their approval, according to the announcement made by Charles J. Haines, president of National Cylinder, and Horace B. Pearson, president of Compressed Industrial.

The statement said the consolidation would combine the third and fourth largest producers of oxygen and acetylene and other industrial gases. Together the companies have plants in practically all industrial centers.

National Cylinder Gas will be the continuing corporation.

British Seek Powder Milk

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—The British purchase commission has announced that it is open to receive offers of spray processed dry skimmed milk for human consumption manufactured after March 1, 1940, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange reported today.

Chicago Grain Futures

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—After a temporary show of rallying power, wheat prices slumped again today and finished fractionally lower at the lowest close since last September 1.

Hedging of the new crop coming to market and improved moisture conditions in the domestic spring wheat belt were blamed largely for the late decline, which erased net gains of almost a cent earlier in the session.

Final prices were unchanged to ⅛ lower. Compared with yesterday's finish, July 72⅛@72⅝, September 73¼@73¾, Corn closed ⅞@¾ down, July 61¼@61⅜, September 57⅛@57¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ higher; rye ¼@½ higher and lard 5@12 lower.

Some wheat buying early in the session was attributed to mills and elevators, with clearing skies in the spring wheat belt and forecast of fair and warmer weather causing some short covering. Cash wheat prices, however, were ½ to 1 cent lower, with the basis steady to a shade easier, despite heavy shipping sales totaling 291,000 bushels, the largest since November, 1938. Receipts of 413 cars were the largest of the season. No. 1 red wheat sold up to 77⅛ in the spot market. Corn closed at the lows for the season, being affected to some extent by evidence of larger country offerings, due possibly to lower redemption rates on old loan grain. Handlers booked 130,000 bushels to arrive, the best in some time, but sold 88,000 for shipment. Corn belt rains also induced selling.

Some new oats were booked to arrive here, but as yet the movement is on a small scale. Rye strength was attributed to commercial demand.

New York Dry Goods

New York, July 12 (AP).—DRY GOODS—Wool goods brokers look for increased activity over the next few months. Business today was routine.

Cotton goods quiet at steady prices. Attention of coarse yarn was directed toward a Navy contract for 750,000 yards of numbered ducks, bids to pass July 26.

Big Board Restricts 'Other Market' Trade

New York, July 12 (AP).—Member firms of the New York Stock Exchange were forbidden to act as dealers in its listed securities on other exchanges after September 1 under a ruling announced today.

The ruling applied directly to 27 firms which now engage in odd-lot dealings or function as specialists on other exchanges in stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Member firms, however, may continue to execute orders on other exchanges in New York Stock Exchange issues at the direction of customers, the exchange said.

The ruling was designed to meet complaints some members were building up markets in New York Stock Exchange issues in other cities, mainly Chicago and Boston, at the expense of the New York market.

Commodities Slant Lower In All Lines

Wheat, Corn and Cotton Recede Moderately; Rubber Is Firm

By the Associated Press

Commodities moved downward in a body yesterday in futures markets.

Virtually alone in the plus column was rubber at New York with a gain of as much as ¼-cent a pound. Buying interest originated in the spot market and spread to futures.

At Chicago wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ of a cent a bushel down at the lowest levels since outbreak of war last September. Corn lost ⅝ to ¾ of a cent. Crop news was the most important influence in the pit.

Cotton at New York ended 15 cents a bale lower to 5 higher. Steadying prices were reports of unwanted rains in parts of the belt. Straits Tin also ended with irregular changes.

Losses in other major staples at New York were measured mostly in a few hundredths of a cent. Depressed were copper, hides, silk, cocoa, sugar, wool tops, cottonseed oil and Santos coffee.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities, based on 1926 as 100, hit a new low for the year at 71.09, compared with 71.43 Thursday.

Brokers Reported Trading Heavily On Own Account

Members of the New York Stock Exchange traded 1,970,135 shares, or 25.56 per cent, of the total round lot exchange transactions during the week ended June 22.

Securities Commission officials, reporting this yesterday, said that it was the largest percentage of member transactions for their own accounts since the commission has been reporting these transactions. The previous high percentage was 25.3 in the week ended May 2, 1936.

Of the total member trading, purchases amounted to 1,012,955 shares and sales to 957,180 shares, of which 142,010 shares were short sales. Total round lot volume on the exchange for the week ended June 22 was 3,852,980 shares, of which 202,060 were short sales.

Mengel Co. Billings Rise in First Half

Louisville, Ky., July 12 (AP).—The Mengel Co., wood products firm, today reported billings for the first six months of 1940 totaled $4,806,000, an increase of $788,000 over the same period in 1939.

The company, blaming war conditions in Europe, said June billings while 6 per cent above those for June, 1939, were far below the percentage increase for the six months period this year. June billings totaled $744,000.

Cottonseed Crushing Decreases in Period

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cottonseed crushed in the 11-month period, August 1 to June 30, totaled 4,109,491 tons, compared with 4,400,486 tons in the corresponding period a year ago, and that cottonseed on hand at mills June 30 totaled 64,391 tons, compared with 139,428 tons a year ago.

Another D. C. Agency Sets June Record

Jefferson Life Unit Here Leads All 47 Branches in U. S.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Washington agency of Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. was first in paid business for June. Its total of $340,000 made it a leader last month among the 47 agencies of the company throughout the United States and marked the first time it had ever attained this position.

F. McKey Smith, manager of the local office, territory of which includes the District of Columbia and 18 counties in Maryland, was commended by Ralph C. Price, vice president of the company, and Karl Ljung, jr., superintendent of agencies, at the home office, Greensboro, N. C. The agency's paid business for the half year aggregates $750,000, and it stood ninth in the national list of agencies for that period.

Mr. Smith has been manager of the local agency for the past three years, coming here from Norfolk, Va., January 7, 1937. In 1936 the Washington unit did $422,000 worth of business. In 1937, the first year of Mr. Smith's administration, it sold more than $1,000,000 worth of insurance and has recorded continued increases for the past two and a half years.

Mortgage Figures

While applications for Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance involving new homes reflected a seasonal decline last month, they exceeded any month reached until this spring. After May, which set a new high for FHA business, a total of 18,492 mortgages amounting to $85,226,150 were selected for appraisal by this Federal agency in June on homes to be built under its inspection. This compared with 14,798 mortgages in the amount of $71,005,994, in June, 1939, an increase of 25 per cent in number and 20 per cent in amount. May figures were 22,053 mortgages for $101,217,472.

Aetna "Stars" Return

Paul D. Sleeper, general agent of the Aetna Life Insurance Co. of this area, said that members of his agency have just returned from the conference at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. This agency led all other Aetna agencies in the United States in having six men who had qualified for ten or more years for these annual company meetings.

The men were F. N. Stricklin, H. C. Fisher, H. B. McGuire, J. L. Richards, L. E. Harris and C. B. Myers. In addition, B. H. Lingo, E. M. Crump, Chan C. Mason, W. E. Lee and Milton L. Bloomberg were among the company's leaders and were qualified delegates. Others who produced the necessary business to receive an invitation to the conference were Thomas Hamlin, George C. Mason and J. M. Downey.

Mr. Sleeper also announced that the business obtained by his agency during June was larger than for any month for almost two

Contract Bridge

This question concerns the playing of today's hand. The cards, bidding and opening lead are shown in the box. You are to play the North-South cards so as to make the contract of five spades. Plan your play, then compare it with the explanation.

Today's Hand

SOUTH DEALER
♠ 7 5 2
♡ 9 8 6 4
◇ A 10 9 4 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass	Pass
3 ♠	3 ♣	3 ♠	4 ♣
4 ♠	5 ♣	Pass	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ◇.

West's strong overcalls mark him with two good suits, probably at least five cards in length, leaving him only three cards in diamonds and in trumps. Of course, the lead looks like a singleton. The queen of diamonds is taken by dummy's ace and a trump is lead, South finessing the jack to win the trick. The king of clubs then is played, for East must be kept out of the lead at all costs. West wins with the ace and shifts to trumps, but his play makes little difference. South wins the trump lead and trumps the last club, and is then safe in playing a diamond to his own hand so that trumps may be pulled, for West cannot have another trump. The diamonds give South a heart discard, so that but two tricks are lost in all.

THIS IDEA OF MY POSING AS A TRAMP TO GET INFORMATION OUT OF BOWERS— I WONDER IF IT'S SO GOOD, AFTER ALL!
NOPE. IT'S NOT IN YOUR LINE. —I'VE JUST THE THING FOR YOU— AN INTERVIEW WITH BRENDA FIELDS.
ME INTERVIEW THAT DIZZY DEB? AW, HAVE A HEART!
BRENDA'S REALLY A CHARMING GIRL, EVEN IF HER DAD DOES OWN HALF THE TOWN.
I'D GLADLY TRADE ASSIGNMENTS WITH YOU!
WHY MUST THESE EMBARRASSING THINGS ALWAYS HAPPEN TO ME?

WELL, PUTTING ON A SHOW IN A COURTROOM IS A NEW EXPERIENCE TO ME!
YES, BUT WASN'T THE JUDGE A FINE SQUARE-SHOOTER! THAT'S THE KIND OF HE-MAN I LIKE!
YEAH, ME, TOO! I COULD GO FOR TH' JUDGE IN A BIG WAY!
SO, I NOTICED—
I THOUGHT YOU WOULD NEVER GET THROUGH TAKING BOWS AFTER YOUR ACT IN THE COURTROOM!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

GOING TO DRAW SOME COLD WATER FOR MY BATH IN THE MORNING. SAVES TIME
WELL, DON'T TURN ON THE HOT WATER. I WANT IT FOR MY BATH TONIGHT
HAVE YOU FORGOTTEN YOU LEFT THE WATER TURNED ON?
OH, YEAH. TURN IT OFF FOR ME, WILL YOU!
CAN'T YOU TELL THE HOT FROM THE COLD FAUCET IN YOUR OWN HOME YET?
OH, DID I TURN ON THE HOT?
WELL, YOU CAN TAKE YOUR HOT BATH NOW, CAN'T YOU?
BUT I DON'T WANT TO TAKE IT NOW. WHEN I DO IT'LL BE COLD!

Listen! with Glynn

John Charles Daly fans please note. The handsome John Charles, who's WJSV's leading man about town as well as out of town on those assignments which are having a slightly graying effect on Harry Crow, WJSV's auditor, is taking over Albert Warner's network news broadcasts while Al is in Chicago for the convention. John Charles was scheduled for the Chicago trip, but network officials decided at the last minute that nasty, old duty was important, too, and that some of the CBS varsity should stick around Washington, just in case. Young Mr. Daly's feelings are a little mixed, to say the least. Clyde Hunt, WJSV's chief engineer, also remains about until further notice, for the same reason.

Both Harry C. Butcher, CBS's vice president in Washington, and A. D. Willard, jr., WJSV's general manager, are doing their bit as members of the District of Columbia Defense Committee. The group numbers 25 of the District's leading business men and one of its major aims is to aid the National Guard in its recruiting drive to bring enrollment up to full strength. Messrs. Butcher and Willard among other things will serve as trouble-shooters, trying to iron out any employer-employe difficulties which might arise out of the fact that National Guardsmen are spending three weeks at camp this year instead of the usual two.

D. C. Methodist Union Holds Installation

S. W. McIntosh Takes Office as President Of Religious Group

Samuel W. McIntosh, local lawyer, was installed as new president of the Washington Union and Church Extension Society last Tuesday, at a meeting of its trustees at the National Press Club.

McINTOSH

Other officers are O. O. Thomen, first vice president; Henry Gilligan, second vice president; Edwin Dice, recording secretary; William E. Springer, corresponding secretary; C. Wendel Shoemaker, treasurer; Charles H. Gray, assistant treasurer, and the following trustees:

Dr. H. W. Burgan, Renah F. Camalier, Paul B. Cromelin, Dr. John R. Edwards, the Rev. W. Clark Main, W. W. Marlow, Dr. Ralph D. Smith, J. Mark Trice, Dr. G. Ellis Williams, Walter M. Bastian and George L. Conner. The last named was elected to the board in place of the Rev. Clarence H. Corkran, who moved to Martinsburg, W. Va.

Native of Francisville, Ill., McIntosh came here in 1917 upon a civil service appointment to the United States Engineer's Office. He was appointed subsequently assistant clerk to the Committee on Military Affairs of the U. S. Senate, of which the late Senator George E. Chamberlain, of Oregon, was then chairman. He later was named assistant secretary to that legislator, and served as his secretary during Chamberlain's term as United States Shipping Board Commissioner. McIntosh resigned in 1923 to become associated with the law firm of Chamberlain & Nyce, now Long, St. Louis & Nyce, with which he is affiliated at this time.

McIntosh is a member of the official board and finance committee of Foundry Methodist Church; board of trustees of Swartzell Methodist Home and of Sibley Memorial Hospital. He served as president of the Methodist Union in 1934 and 1935. Married, he and Mrs. McIntosh reside at 1313 Buchanan street northwest.

Frank J. Sheed, internationally-known lecturer and publisher, of London and New York City, will address the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild meeting tomorrow at 3 p. m. in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K streets, northwest.

SHEED

He is founder of the Westminster Guild of London, after which the local organization is patterned, and is also head of the Sheed and Ward Publishing firm of New York City. He has spoken here before. Dr. Edward J. Heffron will conduct the meeting, which is open to the general public.

Hugh McKenna will direct the afternoon meeting in Public Library Park; Dr. William A. Russell, vice moderator of the Guild, will be in charge of the evening meeting there, and the Rev. Alonzo McDonnell, the night meeting in Franklin Park.

Science Churches To Hear Sermons On 'Sacrament'

"Sacrament" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are invited to church services, including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

The Golden Text is from John 4:23: "The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take, eat: this is my body." (Mark 14:22.)

Diggers Hunting St. Peter's Grave At Pope's Order

Vatican City, July 12 (AP).—A search for the original grave of St. Peter in the crypts under the great church named for him began today at the command of Pope Pius XII, Vatican sources said.

Workmen started digging, with Enrico Galleazzi, chief architect of the Vatican, and Bartolomeo Nogara, director of the Papal museums, supervising the work.

St. Peter's body is supposed to lie in a vault under the main altar, but the exact spot of the original tomb has not been known.

The apostle was put to death by the Romans on Vatican Hill in the year 67 A. D. Constantine the Great had a basilica erected over the grave at the foot of Vatican Hill. This was replaced by the present Church of St. Peter in the sixteenth century.

A Vatican informant said the Pope decided to order a search for the original tomb after traces of Constantine's basilica were found recently in work under St. Peter's.

D. C. Woman Leads Baraca-Philathea Syracuse Service

Syracuse, N. Y., July 12 (AP).—Delegates to the jubilee convention of the World-Wide Baraca-Philathea Union were cheered tonight by the arrival of their president, William Camelford, of Dunnville, Ontario.

Camelford was held up at the Canadian border opposite Buffalo unable to obtain a passport visa from Ottawa, Ontario, Canada's capital. The passports were held up by the jam occasioned by new regulations requiring a passport to cross the border.

Another arrival was Albert F. Lyons, of Boston, president of the World-Wide board of trustees, who was prevented from attending earlier sessions because of illness.

Formed today at the convention, which marks 50 years of "winning souls to God" since the first Baraca class was formed in Syracuse 50 years ago, was a new organization to be known as the Golden Jubilee Boosters. Stephen Salmon, of Endicott, N. Y., vice president of the New York State Union, was chosen general chairman, and Mrs. Frank Brown, of Richmond, Va., president of the Richmond City Union, was named secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. S. C. Humphrey, of Alexandria, Va., was a group leader for a secret prayer session today.

New Cleric Assumes Duties At Holy Comforter Chapel

Rev. Mr. Arnold Was Successful Musician Before Graduation

By Robert Tate Allan

Holy Comforter Episcopal Chapel, Seventh and Oglethorpe streets northwest, has welcomed the musically-minded Rev. Howard Sylvester Arnold as minister-in-charge. He assumed his duties on July 1.

In contrast to his predecessor, the Rev. John S. Kromer, who sacrificed a military career to enter the ministry, Mr. Arnold was a successful church musician before graduation from the General Theological Seminary, New York, in June. He was ordained a deacon on June 11.

The clergyman was appointed to the local post by Dr. F. J. Bohanan, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, of which Holy Comforter Chapel is a mission. Founded in 1712, St. Paul's is the oldest Protestant Church in the District.

A native of Norwich, Conn., Mr. Arnold was educated at the Norwich Free Academy; Suffield School, Suffield, Conn.; the University of Rochester, and the Eastman School of Music.

He served as organist and choirmaster at Christ Church, Hornell, N. Y.; St. Matthew's Church, Rochester, and St. Clement's New York City, and was director of the Hornell Choral Society and the General Theological Seminary choir. He is a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

Coming to Holy Comforter, he can be assured of wholehearted support from the various organizations, including the representatives governing the mission. They include Mrs. Katherine Du Bois, Mrs. Louise Linton, Mrs. Benjamin Nebitt, Mrs. Louise Simmons, Frank G. Read, Allen Ergood, James T. Scott, sr., Charles E. Wallrer, R. Edward Early, James E. Kreiter, Frank A. Schweitzer, sr., and Herbert McCullough. Early is secretary, Scott, treasurer, and McCullough, assistant treasurer.

Other organization leaders are Miss Mary P. Early, president of the Ladies' Guild; Benjamin Nebitt, Young People's Fellowship, president; Mrs. Pearl Townsend, president of the Girls' Friendly Society; Mrs. Katherine Du Bois, Altar Guild head; Charles G. Criss, scoutmaster; R. Edward Early, Sunday School superintendent; Sherman Kreuzberg, boys' choir leader, and Miss Alice Elliott, organist. Arthur Anderton, publicist for Rock Creek Parish, is an ardent supporter of the chapel.

THE REV. MR. ARNOLD

An altar was recently donated by Mrs. Joseph Fletcher, widow of the Rev. Joseph Fletcher, one-time rector of St. Paul's and later Washington Cathedral librarian. A carpet for the sanctuary also was given recently.

Organized in 1903, the Holy Comforter congregation first met at 1300 Madison street northwest, later at Brightwood avenue and Longfellow street, and in 1905 a chapel rose at Georgia avenue near Madison street.

The chapel subsequently was sold and proceeds were used for construction of the present structure, of Georgian Colonial architecture, similar to the design of the Pohick and Aquia (Va.) churches. The building was opened by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, on Jnue 12, 1938.

Holy Comforter, one of the many missions Rock Creek Parish has supported, is hoping to reduce its church debt in the near future to establish its independency. Mr. Arnold is the fourth General Theological Seminarian to be appointed to Rock Creek missions by Dr. Bohanan in the past few years.

"AMERICA, THE BEAUTIFUL"
. . . KATHERINE LEE BATES . . .

For amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties
America! America!
God shed His grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

This patriotic hymn was inspired by a journey from East to West in 1893. The white buildings of the Columbian Exposition—the expanse of spacious skies—the purple mountain majesties impressed her vividly. Each line voices the true patriot's dream for a future when all this natural beauty may be undimmed by human tears.
